Easy, Mr. Ford!
Berlin-New York, 5 Hours.
The Cat Will Mew.
When the Blade Falls.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1928.

AT Chester, Pa., Henry Ford walked seven miles, then ran a 100-yard race against a man half his age.

THAT proves extraordinarily good condition and temperate life in a man past 60. But if Ford had an employe as important to him as he is to the industrial welfare of the United States, he would not allow that employe to do any 100-yard dashing. He would say, "Each year that you live your heart loses efficiency. Unaccustomed strain is dangerous. Be sensible."

And that is what 112,000 men, to whom Ford pays good wages, would like to say to Henry Ford. For their comfort it is said here.

A GERMAN automobile, propelled by explosives, attained in two seconds a speed of 62 miles an hour. Serious German scientists predict this "rocket" principle, applied to airplanes, will mean a Berlin-to-New York flight in five hours.

THIS sounds "impossible" to those without imagination. A speed of a thousand miles an hour might easily be attained by controlling the driving force of high explosives. An airplane thus driven would need no wings to keep it up, only small wings, or a parachute, to be released in time for the landing.

LET Hercules do what he may, the cat will mew and dog will have his day.

You may add to that Shakespearean statement, let the Federal Reserve do what it may, the speculator will gamble and Lamb will have his day.

"CALL MONEY," with which men gamble in stocks, is firm at 6 per cent. It was 4 per cent a little while ago. Still the Lambs gamble. Stocks went up again yesterday. Brokers, cheered by promised restoration of the five-hour day, sent out the usual notices that don't mean anything. Cheerfulness reigned.

AGITATION against public executions is started in France.

When a man is to be guillotined in Paris, crowds gather before daylight on the Place de la Rougette, where the guillotine stands 100 yards from the entrance to the dark prison.

A CROWD of women, men and boys shout and laugh as the sun rises and some hated criminal is brought out.

And when the blade falls and the head drops into the basket, many rush to dip their handkerchief in the blood "for luck." Not exactly a "civilizing influence."

DR. JOHN D. WATSON, a "behaviorist psychologist," if you know what that is, says a "reconditioning plant" should be established to put damaged minds in order.

Human minds, like worn automobiles and washing machines, could be renovated and the mind turned in any direction desired.

BEHAVIORIST psychologists perhaps do not realize that the human mind is an old product, dating back through 1,000,000 years of human life, and 50,000,000 previous years of animal life.

You cannot change that ancient mechanism easily. But you can give a fair chance to such mind as a man may have, with education, diet, exercise and sleep.

FARMERS in the Little Karoo and other parts of Cape Province are disturbed by the worst drought in South America's recorded history. No rain has fallen in four years, fertile lands turn to deserts, farm houses are falling into ruins, the last green leaf has disappeared.

WE HAVE all cause for thankfulness. Lack of rainfall would make life impossible. A tilting of the earth, spilling the ocean, would sweep this continent with a tidal wave a mile high. A change in water from H_2O to H_2O_2 would change that water into peroxide of hydrogen. And if, like other substances, water contracted with the cold, instead of expanding as it turns to ice, the ice would sink to the bottom of lakes and rivers, accumulate there and prevent navigation.

We have reason to be thankful.

MADELINE COONEY

Madeline Cooney, 16, South Fork (Pa.), honor student of the 1928 class of South Fork High School, has finished a 12-year public school course in 10 years and was never late or absent. She will enter Temple University next fall.

Pit Blast Widow Is Robbed

MATHER, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—Widowed when her husband was killed in Mather mine here Saturday, Mrs. Susie Lysaonski, mother of 10 children, turned to friends for help. One she asked into her home was Charles Vondiski, 38, who often had visited before.

Mrs. Lysaonski had just received $100 from a grown son to help defray funeral expenses. Informed that the company would pay for all funerals, Mrs. Lysaonski placed the money in a pocketbook along with $250 saved from the late husband's wages.

Leaving the room a moment the woman returned to find Vondiski missing along with the money.

MAYOR'S AUTO IN CRASH

Mayor Charles H. Kline's automobile, furnished him by the city, was partially wrecked early this morning when it smashed into a street car at Ellsworth and Maryland avenues, and veered into a parked automobile, injuring a girl and a man.

John Madden, 53, 6952 Monticello street, chauffeur for the Mayor, who said he lost control of the car, is in bed suffering from cuts on his hand and pains in his chest, and Miss Betty Butler, 21, of 2121 Forbes street, is at her home suffering from bruises and shock.

An investigation has been ordered by the Mayor, inasmuch as he was at his home all evening and knew nothing of the accident until this morning.

"I know very little about the accident," Mayor Kline said this morning, "and will defer comment until I am familiar with the particulars. I did not know the car was away from the garage."

Miss Butler, who was in the automobile owned by William Spiro, of 1432 Hampshire street, said the accident happened so suddenly she did not have time to save herself.

"We had stopped for a moment to buy some candy for the children," Miss Butler said, "when I heard the crash as the other machine struck the street car and I saw it head for our car. I got one of the children out of the way, covered my face with my hands, and then the crash and I fainted."

In Spiro's car were Marie Spiro, his sister-in-law; Florence Butler, sister of Elizabeth; Edward Roberts, of 1620 Fifth avenue, and William Spiro, nephew of the owner of the car.

The headlights, fenders and steering apparatus of the Mayor's car were damaged and it was towed to a garage. Spiro's car was damaged about $50 and he was able to drive away.

Both Madden and Miss Butler were taken to the Homeopathic Hospital where their injuries were dressed and were then taken to their homes.

WRECKER OF HOMES, HE SAYS

"Prohibition, in my opinion, is a rank failure. It has made more young criminals, has broken up more homes and has blighted the lives of more girls than any other one cause. I strongly favor modification or repeal of the present dry law."

Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh, for 20 years a police officer, who declares he never took a drink in his life, today voiced this estimate of prohibition.

The city police force, Walsh declared, is attempting to enforce the law, but is hampered by shortage of men and multiplicity of duties ranging from directing traffic to guarding school children.

"My experience as a police officer," said Walsh, "proves to my own satisfaction that prohibition is impractical. In the years before prohibition a man could go into a saloon, get one or two drinks and be satisfied. Now if a man finds a place where liquor is sold, he doesn't stop at one or two drinks and becomes intoxicated, because he isn't sure he will be able to procure liquor again soon.

"More young people are drinking since prohibition than ever before in the history of the country.

"I favor abolition or modification of the present law and going back to the old system of regulation by the courts only that I would provide that if saloonkeepers violated the law his license should be revoked for all time, instead of for one or two years.

"The police, despite criticism, have always attempted to enforce the prohibition law and will continue to do so, but we are handicapped by lack of men. Pittsburgh is one of the most congested cities in the country and many men are needed for traffic regulation. Many other duties require their attention. Beats must be patroled, criminals apprehended and school children protected at crossings. We have less than 1,000 men. Council would do a great thing if it gave us 300 more men."

Superintendent Walsh was silent on the federal grand jury probe of the local rum ring.

BUCS SET FOR CUBS

Given fresh impetus by the sparkling play of Daredevil Dick Bartell, the ailing Pirates today were ready for the best the Cubs could offer in the second game of the Forbes Field series.

The lad from Alameda, Cal., played his first full game in the big show yesterday and what he did was sufficient to set the fans agog. The Cubs just could not get anything through the keystone station, so clever was Dick.

Southpaw Fred Fussell will attempt to make the Bears behave today. The infield combination will remain the same for several days owing to the illness of Traynor and Adams.

Charlie Root is billed to twirl for the Cubs.

2 Collapse At Dance

A hundred hours of continuous dancing took its toll in the Homestead dance marathon today. Mollie Porco, 4686 Lorigan street, collapsed on the floor shortly before 8 a. m., and Alberta Gowan, of Nant-y-Glo, who surrendered at 3 a. m., suffered from exhaustion and had to be sent to a hospital.

Thirty-one couples were shuffling along at 2 o'clock when the hundred and eleventh hour began. Seven couples slumped out of the picture during the early morning hours.

Flowers by the armful were sent to the contestants who remain in the grind today and the training quarters rivaled a conservatory.

Those who faded out today and their elapsed time are:

Audrey Banes and Louis Zosaito, 96:33.
Marion Love and William Stahle, 96:45.
Alberta Gowan and Dominic LaConde, 99:05.
Eleanor Uhrin and John Uhrin, 99:10.
Hazel Akens and Joseph Leahey, 100:05.
Gloria Wendall and Jack Kobo, 102:15.
Mollie Porco and German Romit, 103:50.

FILIBUSTER BROKEN

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—After paralyzing the Seventieth Congress for more than 24 hours by blocking all legislation in the Senate, a group of filibustering senators at noon today relaxed their battle long enough to permit adoption of a conference report on the $100,000,000 Muscle Shoals program.

The vote was 45 to 34.

The report was sent to the House where leaders predicted its early adoption.

A further break in the filibuster came a few minutes later when the Boulder Dam bill was temporarily sidetracked to permit consideration of the conference report on the new $223,000,000 tax reduction bill. A sharp fight ensued over the action of the conferes in dropping a provision calling for full publicity on all tax returns.

Determined to prevent enactment at this session of the Muscle Shoals bill, the handful of opponents of that legislation held the lines through the night hours in a filibuster which for a time showed no sign of abatement.

McKellar, of Tennessee, was talking against time as the every day working people of Washington went about their business. There had been no break in proceedings except for a period between 4:30 and 7:20 o'clock this morning, during which sergeants-at-arms scoured the city to produce a quorum and permit the resumption of the discussion.

The Senate chamber had a bedraggled, weary look under the flooding yellow lights above its ornamented skylight. There were scarcely any Senators on the floor itself. The doors of both party cloakrooms loomed dark with lights inside extinguished so that those who had manned the trenches on either side through the night might snatch a little sleep.

How Strong Is Al Smith In Western Pennsylvania?

TO answer this question, that is heard everywhere in Pittsburgh today, the Sun-Telegraph prints a ballot below.

These ballots will not appear every day, but occasionally; and on those days no extra papers will be delivered to any agent nor will papers be sold in bulk to any individual or organization. Ballots received in bulk will not be counted. No more than three in one envelop. Thus a fairly accurate estimate of the relative strength of Hoover and Smith may be secured.

Watch the Sun-Telegraph for an early announcement of the results.

For President of the United States, I expect to vote for—

HOOVER | SMITH

(Mark X after your choice)

Four years ago I voted for—

COOLIDGE | DAVIS

Mrs. Coolidge in Rumble Seat When Son Takes "Girl Friend" Riding

International News Service.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., May 25.

WHEN "the boy's girl friend" is along, even the first lady of the land has to take a back seat in the automobile.

John Coolidge was driving. At his side was Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Connecticut's Governor and owner of the sport roadster. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and her friend, Mrs. R. B. Hill, both wrapped in blankets, were in the rumble seat.

After visiting Mrs. Coolidge's mother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, at Cooley-Dickinson Hospital, the party enjoyed a brisk ride over the country roads of Hampshire county.

HERTHA KATHS

Hertha Kaths, San Francisco girl, has been freed by the courts from the psychopathic ward, Los Angeles hospital, where she was held for acute alcoholism.

NAMES CLAUS SPRECKELS

Hertha named Claus Spreckels, San Diego millionaire and one of California's wealthiest and most prominent, as the man who had caused her trouble. There had been an affair between them, she said, and she was arrested after a trip with him from New York to San Francisco. Above is Spreckels' palatial home.

'FRAMED'

Her daughter was "framed", said Mrs. Elizabeth Kaths, to prevent prosecution of Spreckels by Federal authorities. Spreckels is a married man.

ACCUSED

The attention which Spreckels paid to her is the cause of her arrest and incarceration, says Hertha. The courts overruled police and freed her.

ARREST

It was a 'trumped-up' charge Hertha said. Here is a full face photo of her, an exclusive one. Judge T. C. Gould believed her story.

MOTHER AND SISTER

Mrs. Kaths (right) and Hertha's sister, Betty, are demanding a thorough investigation by the district attorney. They went to Los Angeles to fight for Hertha's freedom from their 'Frisco home. Mrs. Kaths revealed details of the romance.

10 MINES CLOSED DOWN

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.) — The Consolidation Coal Company in which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is a majority stockholder, has taken the first step toward a solution of what it believes is the major ill of the bituminous industry—overproduction—by ordering 10 of its mines closed.

Announcement of the action came from Robert C. Hill, chairman of the board, who said that four mines in the Somerset field of Pennsylvania and six in the Fairmont field of West Virginia are being shut down.

This throws out of employment about 2,500 men, or 20 per cent, of the employes in the two fields affected.

"But this means that for the remaining 80 per cent far better conditions will exist," Mr. Hill said.

"It is hoped that they will be able to work full time because of this measure instead of the part time on which they were scheduled before," he said. "The company expects to take care of all married men and their families by replacements if necessary. At this time of year it should not be hard for the single men, who are not tied down, to find employment."

This action is in line with an announcement of the company's policy sent to other coal producers recently by George J. Anderson, newly-elected president of the Consolidation Coal Company.

The Consolidation Coal Company, the statement said, sees no relief from the coal industry's present plight in cutting prices, nor any contribution to future stability in cutting wages. It laid down the principle that "the primary object of both mine labor and mine management must be the most regular work-time possible under a proper wage basis."

NO MORE BABES, HE PROMISES

International News service.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 25.—With tears streaming from his eyes, Edward Cromwell, 40, promised today that he would not endanger the life of his fragile wife by compelling her to bear more children.

He was released from jail yesterday where he was held on complaint of his wife, Edith, who wanted authorities to compel him to stop making her bring children into the world. She had had 13, all but five of whom died.

"I love children and I want plenty of them," he said. "But every body seems to think that my wife is not able to bear any more. I'm going to take their advice and just work to support my family from now on."

"We don't have enough food to keep us going," said Mrs. Cromwell, "but if Ed behaves himself the way he says he will I think we will get along all right. If he sticks to it I'll be happy with him. Our only worry now is that he might have lost his job on account of my having him arrested.

"When I look back at myself as a young girl 18 years old and look at myself now, I can't believe my eyes. I was just a happy kid and a lot of people said I was good looking and I was bright and smart and full of pep.

"I hate to say it but it's the truth: Marriage has brought me ill health and poverty. Bearing 13 children has just about ruined me.

"There are millions of cases like mine. And there are millions of pretty, bright, well-dressed young girls who will marry inconsiderate men. A short time afterward they will no longer have pretty clothes. They ought to think this over, especially if they are planning to marry a poor man."

ALIQUIPPA HIGH SCHOOL BAND SEEKS U. S. TITLE

POLE BLIMP FIGHTING AGAINST ICE, WIND

KNIGS BAY, May 25.—Battered by winds, her fuel supply running low, the polar dirigible, Italia, was reported at 2 p. m. today still to be fighting her way toward Spitzbergen and safety after her triumphal cruise over the North Pole.

One report was of an unsigned message, believed to have been written by Gen. Umberto Nobile, that told of a desperate struggle against a storm.

An ice crust was forming on the Italia's hulk, the message said, and the crew had repaired several rips in her covering.

Before this there had come a message—at 11 a. m.—that said the Italia hoped to land at 4 p. m.

At that hour, the Italia had been gone nearly 60 hours on what Gen. Umberto Nobile, her commander, had planned as a 40-hour flight.

News of the Italia partially relieved great anxiety that had been felt for her safety.

There had been no word of her for several hours—and she had been due here at midnight.

The Italia was believed to have 13 men aboard in addition to Gen. Nobile.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that was centered over Wisconsin yesterday morning, is now centered over Ohio and Indiana, and covers the entire Ohio Valley states section. It produced thunderstorms over Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Eastern Iawo and Eastern Missouri, during last night, and rain is falling this morning over Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia. The rains were generally light to moderate.

High pressure covers the Eastern Rocky Mountain states and the Western Plains states, with its crest over Wyoming, Colorado, Western South Dakota and Western Nebraska. It is attended by generally clear skies and moderately cool, but there were no frosts reported.

River Conditions.

Rain over the Monongahela River checked the fall, and caused a slight rise at a few points. The Allegheny is falling slowly. More rain is expected today and tonight, which may start a more general rise. The marks at Point Bridge at 10 a. m. today showed 12.0 feet and river falling.

Dr. H. M. Parshall, whose stable won more races than any other last year, will be decked out in the regalia.

Murphy, who retired from the sport at the end of the 1927 campaign, presented the outfit to Parshall.

KITTANNING SPAN HELD MENACE

Removal of the highway bridge across the Allegheny River at Kittanning, declared to be an obstruction to navigation, came to an issue late yesterday between the United States War Department and the Armstrong County Commissioners at a hearing before Maj. Jarvis A. Bayne, district engineer.

The government's contention that the bridge constitutes a serious obstruction to the free use of the river was backed up by representatives of large industries, business interests and civic organizations, more than 100 persons being crowded into the room in the Federal Building to take part in the discussion.

While admitting that the bridge is an obstruction, the Armstrong Commissioners held that a bill will be presented to the Legislature at the coming session whereby the State Highway Department will take over all bridges on primary highways, and in this way relieve the county of the expense of building and maintenance. Commissioner John D. Knoble explained that the citizens were so hopeful of the passage of such a bill that it would be unwise to present a bond issue to raise funds for the building of a new bridge at this time.

Several speakers charged the Commissioners with tardy tactics, and Capt. Thomas M. Rees, 85, declared that his firm had suffered losses of $1,000 a week on their boats as a result of the bridge being an obstruction as far back as 1887. It was pointed out that all improvements will be completed on locks and dams for deep water to Kittanning within a few months, and the immediate removal of the obstruction was urged. The Carnegie Steel Company, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, the Brackenridge Steel Company and 18 other industrial concerns joined in the protest against the present bridge.

Stay Awake! -:- MARATHON A WORLD UNTO ITSELF -:- Next! Shave?

FOOLISH?

Now isn't this foolish? Here you have two first-class marathoners in Homestead dragging around with an alarm clock attached to milady's ear. What, you may ask, does one do with an alarm clock when he doesn't get a chance to go to sleep?

IT GROWS

Marathons may come and go, but hair grows on forever. Here, Frank Celender and Harriet Poward are having their hair right properly cut. One just must, you know, look his best—his very best—when one is dancing in a smart marathon. Nothing else is being done.

GRAPEFRUIT

In a marathon, if you insist, one eats—one eats almost anything. To prove that, Sally Bennett and Don Manson attempt grapefruit. They're grapefruit because they're not oranges.

WHAT NEXT?

Carp caviar, perhaps, will be next. A huckster would make a rich living at that Homestead marathon. And isn't it strange, too, how tastes vary? Frank Celender and Harriet Poward have a yen and a flare, respectively, for cherries.

TRAIL KIDNAPING DEATH HINT

"SHE WON'T BE HOME!"

SAY IT WITH SOMETHING ELSE!

He would say it "with flowers," would James Johnson (lower left), Chicago, but he'll have to say it with something else because flowers wither. Mrs. Johnson (top), estranged, sought a divorce you see; Johnson sent her flowers and candy. She asked the courts for an injunction and received it; Johnson violated it; she had him cited for contempt; he told his tale; the judge set aside the injunction and established "visiting" day as Wednesday, advising Mrs. Johnson to allow him to call. Wednesday came and Johnson sent flowers, more flowers. Then he received a 'phone call: "Mrs. Johnson won't be home tonight!" Wednesday passed and now he's forced to wait a week.

E. B. ZIMMERMAN AGAIN DEMOCRATS' SECRETARY

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—E. B. Zimmerman, Philadelphia, former secretary of the Democratic state committee, has been reappointed to that position by John R. Collins, Coudersport, the new Democratic state committee chairman. It was also announced that state headquarters would soon be opened here. For several years the party has had no state headquarters.

KIDNAPING THREAT TRACED

By T. H. B. PATTERSON,
Staff Correspondent.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 25.—The search for the missing Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, spread to Litchfield, O., last night, the town where a mysterious letter was mailed to the Rosenbaum family. Youngstown detectives traveled to Litchfield, armed with photographs of finger prints on the letter immediately after it was received late yesterday.

"Keep on. You are doing good. You will never find her alive," was the contents of the Litchfield letter which was sent to Max Rosenbaum, father of the missing girl. Below the writing the letter bore a crude drawing of a skull and crossbones and the only signature was the word "bah."

Another letter which was written in an entirely different hand was received a few hours earlier by the saddened parents. It was mailed in Williard, O., and read: "See some man in Williard, O." Williard is a railroad terminal 40 miles west of Litchfield. Litchfield is a small town of about 200 in Medina county, 30 miles west and slightly north of Akron. A man was seen driving an automobile in which a girl was seated near Litchfield on Saturday.

Police Chief James J. McNichols last night announced that he would see that immunity was obtained for any persons who may come to him with information that will lead to the recovery of the girl, even though they be implicated innocently. The police head also has urged newspapermen to stay away from the Rosenbaum home and asked the Rosenbaums to stop giving information to anyone but police.

MINE BLAST SURVIVORS REST

STILL IN HOSPITAL

Four of the survivors of the Mather mine disaster are still in Waynesburg Hospital and they have some harrowing experiences to tell. Left to right are shown Walter Rearick, Lot Davis, Tony Miller and Stanley Sakosky. Lot Davis, several times reported dead, is suffering from a fractured skull. Miller also has a fractured skull and Sakosky is suffering from a crushed chest. He is given oxygen every two hours.

Injured

EDWARD GROSS

Edward Gross, 8, 512 East Eighth avenue, Munhall, is in Homestead Hospital in serious condition with injuries received when he was struck by an automobile.

ELOPEMENT IN PLANE DENIED

A reported airplane ride taken by Miss Maude Miller, 24, of McKeesport and John C. Blair, 23, of Latrobe Monday from Long View flying field, near Latrobe to Hagerstown, Md., is causing them plenty of annoyance.

A rumor was started concerning the marriage of the two in the Maryland city, but both denied this. In spite of their denial word comes from Hagerstown that two obtained a license there. Mrs. Henry J. Miller, the girl's mother, was called on the teleprone at her home at 1629 Lee street, McKeesport, and she too, denied the marriage. Miss Miller has been teaching school in Latrobe since September.

Who's He?

"JACK"

Who is this man? At the Beaver County Farm, near Monaca, he is known as "Jack," a victim of amnesia. He was taken to the farm April 15, 1915, from New Brighton Hospital, where he was taken, suffering from frozen feet, half-starved. He is believed to be western from his manner. He remembers nothing of his past life.

SUN-TELE POLL INTEREST GAINS

Interest continues in The Sun-Telegraph's presidential poll. Every mail brings ballots from citizens who desire to help answer the burning question, "How do the people of Western Pennsylvania stand in regard to Hoover and Smith?"

An interesting feature is that many are voting who, because they had not yet come of age, or through indifference, cast no ballots four years ago.

Independence of party affiliation is shown to be widespread. Many who voted for the candidate of one party at the last election say they expect to support the candidate of the rival party this year.

One contributor to the poll rejects both Hoover and Smith and says:

"I expect to vote for a real statesman, Jim Reed or Norris."

Another says: "We have eight votes in our family and all are going to Al Smith. We all voted for Coolidge four years ago."

A third writes: "I expect to vote for Smith because I regard him as the most progressive man in public life today, and because of his unquestioned honesty. The people who know him best say he is the best governor New York has ever had, and it had Hughes and Roosevelt and Cleveland."

The Sun-Telegraph ballots will not be printed every day, and when they do appear no extra papers will be delivered to any agent, nor will papers be sold in bulk. No more than three ballots may be submitted in one envelope. Thus, a fairly accurate estimate of the relative strength of Hoover and Smith may be obtained. Early announcement will be made of the results.

CONNELLSVILLE MAN FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., May 25.—Elmer Eastholm, 43, was found dead from a heart attack in a field near the plant of the Connellsville Macaroni Company yesterday.

START CONSTRUCTION ON M. E. PARSONAGE

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., May 25.—Ground was broken for the $10,000 parsonage to be erected by the First Methodist Episcopal congregation here. It will be a two-story brick and will adjoin the church.

Pittsburgh AS OTHERS SEE US

"Pittsburgh, throbbing engine of industry . . . must be a stimulus to art that presents the conflicts, the struggles, the triumphs of man in all his moods."
—RITA WEIMAN

RITA WEIMAN, author and playwright, was born in Philadelphia, January 5, 1889; studied art in Paris and began writing for the press while attending school. She took up stage composition in 1916 and has written several successful plays. Is well known magazine contributor and author of many novelettes and short stories. Resides in New York City.

RITA WEIMAN

My last visit to Pittsburgh—and the only one, I might add—occurred when I was too young to make note of the industrial aspects of the community. We stayed at the Schenley, and my most enthusiastic recollection is playing tag on the lawn.

However, all the world must know that a city so completely expressing the pulse of these United States as a center of its activities cannot help but influence vitally its artistic product. By the same token, a city so vastly concerned with business must have its balance of striving in the direction of art. I think the Carnegie Institute's active work in connection with theatrical training of every kind conclusively proves this. I know personally several young girls ambitious for stage training who are going to Carnegie Institute next year in preference to any of the colleges throughout the country. Inasmuch as there are several prominent dramatic schools in New York, this choice seems to me a very marked tribute to Pittsburgh.

Rita Weiman

(From Letters collected by Roy Jansen, of Pittsburgh.)

PRESBYTERIANS BATTLE OVER PRINCETON

TULSA, Okla., May 25.—The report of the special committee on Princeton Theological Seminary, subject of bitter contention, was read today before the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. It will be acted upon tomorrow and the lines between Conservatives and Liberals are sharply drawn in the controversy. The Liberals are supporting the report, which recommends radical changes in the mode of government. The Conservatives are mustering all the forces at their command to defeat the proposed new plan.

Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney, pastor of the First Church, Pittsburgh, and Dr. Maitland Alexander, pastor emeritus, are here helping to organize the opposition to the report. Dr. G. W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Church, Pittsburgh, is here using his influence for adoption. None of these ministers is a commissioner, so it is a question whether any one of them will be able to take part in the debate.

The proposed new plan would vest government of the seminary in a single board of control instead of a board of directors and a board of trustees as at present.

HISTORIC WOOD IN GAVEL

Pieces of wood from historic buildings of Oklahoma are in the gavel which was presented this morning to Dr. Hugh K. Walker, the newly elected moderator. Represented in it are the old Indian council houses of Pawhuska, Okmulgee and Tahlequah. Wood from the old Dwight Mission in Northeastern Oklahoma, the old barracks at Fort Gibson and from the famous old council tree still standing in South Cheyenne avenue, Tulsa, are in the gavel. Under the council tree many Indian treaties were made.

Three guests of honor, each a former moderator, were presented to the assembly at the morning session. They were: Dr. Francis L. Patton, 1873; Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, 1898, and Dr. Henry Van Dyke, 1902.

As had been predicted, the election of Dr. Walker, of Los Angeles, to the moderatorship yesterday afternoon was accomplished on the first ballot. Of six candidates who had figured in caucuses Wednesday night only two were in the contest when the time for nominations came. Dr. Walker was nominated by Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, of Newark, N. J., himself one of the candidates in the early campaigning. Dr. J. Ambrose Dunkel, of Indianapolis, his opponent, was nominated by Dr. A. L. Lathem, of Chester, Pa. The vote was: Walker 593, Dunkel 318. The liberal element supported Walker and the conservative Dunkel.

BOY SCOUTS -:- "One, Two, Three—There's a Truck!" -:- COUNT TRAFFIC

ARTHUR SANERA

Boy Scouts from all parts of the county counted traffic in Pittsburgh to help the Better Traffic Committee plan a signal system. Arthur Sanera, Troop 109, rested and counted, too, at Sixth and Liberty avenues.

DIFFICULTY

Ther was a bit of difficulty—you know how those figures are—at Oliver avenue and Smithfield street. But Edmond Granata, Troop 58; Harry Clowes, 79; and George Whittingstall, 58, straightened it out.

R. M'CARTNEY

Robert McCartney, only two months a member of Troop 43, St. Paul's Cathedral, counted as well as anyone. He was at Market street and Liberty avenue.

CAREFUL

Say, these eagle-eyed scouts missing nothing that passed Webster and Sixth avenues. They're William Grusch, 104; Lyne McDowell, 1, Ellinwild; and Frank Goss, 1, Ellinwild. If you could only see the traffic at that corner! "There goes a truck—hey, get that bicycle!"

ENVY?

This little 'newsie' works at Fifth avenue and Smithfield street. Look at him and then say he wouldn't rather do the task assigned to Paul Koch, 45; and Richard Zerpd, 45. Scouts were all over the downtown for the check.

OH, HUM!

At Federal street and Liberty avenue, Fred McFarland, Troop 3, Carnegie, didn't get tired standing. It's just that he discovered that the United States of America had, with some measure of solicitude and forethought, placed a 'desk' for him. There it is.

All Even!

HIT-RUN DRIVER GIVEN YEAR IN DEATH

John Hensel, 22, of the North Side, accused "hit-and-run" driver, caught after a chase, was sentenced to the workhouse for one year in Criminal Court yesterday for killing a pedestrian. He pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter before Judge Joseph M. Swearingen. Hensel struck M. A. Wright, 63, of 1226 Resaca street, attempting to cross the street at North avenue and Arch street, North Side, the night of April 7, it was testified.

Edward Newton, of 911 Arch street, testified that Hensel did not stop and that he gave chase in his car, catching Hensel. After asking a passerby to detain Hensel while he telephoned for the police, Newton said Hensel again escaped. Hensel testified that he did not know he had struck anyone.

Wright had been cashier in the United States customs office here for 27 years.

WOMAN AND MAN FOUND DEAD

Mrs. Gelseller, 62, was found dead early today in her home, 6206 Butler street, by Mrs. Jennie Cook, one of her neighbors. Her body was taken to the morgue. Residents of the neighborhod did not know her first name or if she had relatives living, according to reports to the coroner.

William J. Reed, 70, a blacksmith, was found dead in a stable on the Saltsburg road, Penn township, early today. H. W. Hershey, who found the body, reported to the coroner that the man had been out of work and had been sleeping in the stable.

BUSINESS OVER NORMAL NOW, BABSON SAYS

Roger W. Babson, statistician, told members of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce last night that general business in America today is 5 per cent above normal. He was the principal speaker at their annual dinner-meeting at which President T. P. Gaylord, presided.

"The best students of the business situation feel that industry as a whole must witness some general slackness during the next year. It is due primarily to the fact that our manufacturing capacity continually exceeds our consuming capacity," he said. "Only 40 per cent of all manufacturers in the country are operating at a profit today, and probably 25 per cent are operating at a loss. This cannot continue long." Mr. Babson stated.

"The hope of individual cities such as Pittsburgh, lies not in further increasing manufacturing capacity which already is too great; lies not in the further installation of labor-saving devices which will throw more men out of employment; lies not in consolidation or other methods of artificially upholding prices which always lead to disaster; but in creating a greater demand for Pittsburgh products."

BREMEN FLIERS BACK IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 25.—(INS.)—Baron Gunther von Huenefeld, Maj. James Fitzmaurice and Capt. Hermann Koehl, who conquered the Atlantic in the monoplane Bremen, returned to New York today from Quebec.

Hundreds cheered the trio as they stepped from their train and milled about them as they posed for photographers before leaving in an automobile for the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

VOTE MACHINE BOARD NAMED

Former Congressman William H. Coleman and State Senators Frank J. Harris and Morris Einstein have been appointed a resolutions committee for the meeting of the Republican County Committee tomorrow afternoon in North Side Carnegie Hall. Principal interest in the work of the committee centers upon the expected resolution indorsing the constitutional amendment permitting the use of voting machines.

COUNTY PLANS PORTABLE STEEL VOTING BOOTHS

County commissioners today ordered a survey made of every polling place in the county. They intend to erect portable steel buildings in place of those which are unsanitary and inadequate. More than $100,000 will be spent for buildings. Some of the present polling places, commissioners said, were not fit for women or men to enter. Commissioners said they would be glad to receive recommendations on new places from women's clubs in particular.

BENTLEYVILE BOY S DROWNED IN CREEK

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., May 25.—Slipping from the bank into Pigeon Creek, Joseph Perry, 3, son of Antonio Perry, was drowned yesterday, while playing with other children. SCHWAB URGES LESS HAULAGE FOR STEEL

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—Elimination of cross hauling, or unnecessary transportation, would effect desired economies for the steel industry and obviate the necessity of cutting wages or increasing prices, President Charles M. Schwab told the American Iron and Steel Institute at its semi-annual meeting today.

He recommended that the institute constitute a committee of expert steel men to study the problem and frankly place before the public and the proper public authorities a constructive plan looking to that end, adding that government knowledge and possibly government supervision of such measures would be advisable.

PROFITS INADEQUATE

Explaining that the industry's return of approximately 5 per cent upon its $5,000,000,000 investment is not only inadequate, but the lowest in any of the principal manufacturing industries, Mr. Schwab declared that such a low margin of profit is not conducive to sustained national prosperity. Reduction of costs and increase in prices were suggested as the "most obvious remedies," but belief was expressed that the industry already had gone to the limit in reducing production costs. Wage cuts were held to be undesirable. Price increases, while helpful to the industry and fair from the customers' viewpoint, he said, might be avoided by eliminating waste due to distribution, thus finding another solution of the problem of obtaining adequate returns.

FAVORS HOME MARKET

Mr. Schwab pointed out that when a Chicago steel manufacturer ships 100,000 tons of steel to Pittsburgh at a time when a Pittsburgh manufacturer is shipping a like quantity to Chicago, sales must be made at prices prevailing in the district where the steel is sold. Consequently the prices net less to the manufacturer than if the Chicago manufacturer had supplied the Chicago market and the Pittsburgh manufacturer the Pittsburgh market. Hunger for tonnage and desire to operate at capacity, "fundamental mistakes of the industry," he held to be the chief cause of cross hauling, resulting only in dissipation of profits through unnecessary transportation, since cross hauling does not, by any appreciable amount, increase the output of individual producers.

SEES INCREASED BUSINESS

Turning to business conditions, Mr. Schwab said "America is enjoying an amazing period of prosperity," with the moderation in business, which a presidential year usually brings, less manifest than in other years of political uncertainty. Seasonal conditions were viewed as favorable, with every justification for expecting a volume of business greater than that of 1927.

M'RAE HOST TO HEARST MEN

SAN DIEGO, May 25.—Col. Milton A. McRae was host at a dinner here Wednesday night in honor of three Hearst newspaper executives at which more than 60 prominent San Diego businessmen were guests.

Col. Frank Knox, general manager of all the Hearst papers; George C. Young, publisher of the Los Angeles Examiner, and Roger M. Andrews, publisher of the Detroit Times, were the honored guests.

Col. McRae spoke about the early history of the newspapers in the United States, after which Col. Knox spoke on the future of chain newspapers. He declared the group idea is coming fast in nearly every business. Chain stores are an acknowledged success, he declared, and chain newspapers on a large scale are on the way.

Young spoke briefly on the water problem as affecting California. He said that as soon as this problem is solved the state will have solved more than one-half of its other problems.

GASOLINE BLAST KILLS TWO

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., May 25.—(AP.)—Two men were dead today following an explosion of gasoline fumes in a storeroom of the Evening Journal. Part of the mechanical equipment of the newspaper plant was put out of order by water used in extinguishing the fire that followed the explosion and by the heat of the fire.

Douglas Mesick, 22, died last midnight, several hours after the explosion. Jack Welty, 18, was the other victim.

ROCHESTER MAN HURT AS AUTO OVERTURNS

ROCHESTER, Pa., May 25.—Walter Woods, 24, is in Rochester Hospital with injuries to his head, sustained when an automobile, driven by Forrest E. Gamble, of 129 Adams street, overturned on Sunflower road. Gamble was slightly bruised.

SHARON WOMAN, 98, CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

SHARON, Pa., May 25.—Mrs. Marie Hassel celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday anniversary at her home here yesterday. She has been a resident of this community for 70 years.

SLEEPING SICKNESS CAUSES MAN'S DEATH

SCOTTDALE, Pa., May 25.—C. M. Berkey, 57, grocer, died last night from sleeping sickness. He had been in a state of coma for nearly three weeks.

How To Be Beautiful by Maria Jeritza

"The Open Road."

AT this time of year, the call of outdoors stirs us all to restless longing for the country. Gladly we would spend hours and hours in the open, where the air is like a bouquet, due to the fragrance given off from flowers, plants and trees.

You will, if you are wise, heed this call of Mother Nature to breathe deep of the clean air of the open country. Motoring, horseback riding and hiking are all enjoyable ways of gratifying the urge of country air. But the best of all is walking. For in that way you get the most exercise, and so breathe deepest, filling your lungs with oxygen, which, in turn, fills you with exhilaration and a sense of the joy of living.

Plan to don your stout walking oxfords and comfortable clothes on week-ends for the next month or two, and hike over country roads, choosing, of course, those least frequented by traffic, if you wish to really enjoy the walk. Early morning and late afternoon are equally suitable for a hike, because then the sunlight is less tense than in mid-day.

If you carry a few sandwiches and a bottle of milk or fruit juice, you can add the fun of a picnic meal to your outing. And how good food tastes outdoors! Of course, good company also makes things more enjoyable, so try to bring along a friend or two!

There are sure to be alluring country roads or pleasant lanes within an hour's trolley ride from the busiest city—perhaps just a stone's throw from your door. Start your hike there—do not waste energy walking over city pavements.

If you doubt that weekly hikes of several hours will add clearness to your eyes and skin, a graceful swing to your walk, and the charm of "punch" to your personality, just try the experiment from now until the tense summer heat starts, and you can prove for yourself the truth of my claim.

It is most important from the standpoint of health and beauty not only to walk, but to walk correctly. If you toe out you may weaken and strain muscles which walking correctly strengthens. Toeing out also encourages flat feet. Keep your feet straight when you walk, Indian fashion. This is healthful and graceful.

If every morning, when you arise, you will rise on your toes, in your bare feet, 50 times, gradually raising your body, you will soon strengthen the muscles of your feet and ankles, so that walking will not tire them, provided you wear flat-heeled shoes with flexible arches, when you walk.

American girls have been compared by visiting foreigners with the Greek goddesses of classic sculpture because they are so vitally graceful, erect, symmetrical and wholesome. Be sure that you carry out this illusion by walking as beautifully as a goddess.

Walk about your room on your tip-toes for five minutes every morning, balancing a book on your head, to gain the poised, sinuous motion of hips and feet that gives exquisite grace to walking. Of course, you will not ordinarily walk on your toes. But the exercise breaks the habit of walking on the heels, which is so common and so ugly.

Ten minutes of daily practice should enable you to walk well. Then, if you would experience the joy of living, start out for a day in the open as Walt Whitman used to. He writes:

"Afoot and light-hearted, I take to the open road,
Healthy, free, the world before me,
The long brown path before me, leading wherever I choose."

Joint-Ease for Burning Feet

Now that we know that aching, burning, inflamed feet are caused by troubles in the small bones in the arches of the feet—

And that such troubles can only be reached by Joint-Ease, an active emollient that gets right in direct to the joints and ligaments.

Isn't it about time to discard powders and medicated baths that only reach the outside of the skin—and rub on Joint-Ease, that in two minutes starts to soothe and heal the inside troubles that cause soreness and burning?

—b it on tonight and if there is —urning left in the morning, it —e enough to bother.

14 WEST PENN VETS FETED BY N. E. L. A.

The seventh annual N. E. L. A. banquet, given in honor of the veterans of the West Penn System, was held last night in McCreery's. Over 1,000 employes were present at the gala occasion to give an enthusiastic greeting to 14 of their number who have completed 20 years of continuous service with the various companies of the West Penn System.

This years veterans' class includes:

Ernest R. Kooser, Connellsville; Matthew G. Gilliland, McKeesport; Benjamin F. Lockrone, Uniontown; William T. Smith, Pittsburgh; Peter F. Gassburn, McKeesport; Joseph Musco, New Kensington; Robert J. Hostetter, Connellsville; Luther Wilgowen, Kittanning; James M. Kooser, Charleroi; John A. Snyder, Charleroi; Leslie T. Jackman, Latrobe; Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, Connellsville; Joseph W. Miller, Pittsburgh, and Francis A. Miller, State College.

W. G. Kauffman, chairman, West Penn Section, N. E. L. A. officially welcomed those who have completed 20 years' continuous service in the period beginning May 31, 1927. E. R. Kooser responded for the incoming class of veterans.

Capt. George M. Alexander, president, Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company, delivered the address of the evening.

Service buttons, representing 20 years service were presented to railways veterans by H. L. Mitchell, president, West Penn Railways Company and to power company employes by J. S. Jenks, vice president, West Penn Power Company.

BOY SCOUTS TO DIRECT TRAFFIC

Pittsburgh's traffic check up week comes to an end tomorrow when the Better Traffic Committee's observance of Pedestrian Week is concluded. The week will end with the boys of East Liberty Troop of the Boy Scouts taking over the direction of traffic at Fifth avenue and Wood street and Fifth avenue and Smithfield street.

The boys, who will be under the direction of the officers stationed on those corners, will endeavor to keep the pedestrians from crossing the streets when the stop sign is against them, and Tom C. Venable, assistant Scout executive, who will be in charge of the boys, has asked that general co-operation on the part of the pedestrians be given to the boys.

ACCUSED OF MOVING GOODS AFTER SALE

Accused of having secretly removed furnishings valued at $2,600 from a barber shop and lunch counter he conducted, after he had signed a bill of sale, Peter Jordan, 121 Sixth street, will be arraigned in Central Police Court today. He was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out by a Fourth avenue realtor.

$750,000 BOND ISSUE PUT UP TO WILKINSBURG

Wilkinsburg council last night approved a bond issue of $750,000 for street and sewer improvements, $50,000 to be used for a playground site and equipment. The residents of the borough will vote on the issue June 26.

FELT HOPELESS; NOW WELL AGAIN

Local Motorman Uses Ten Herbs With Remarkable Results; Feels Like New Man.

"I had begun to think my case was hopeless, as I had tried about every kind of medicine that I thought might help me, but nothing gave me any relief," was the statement of Mr. Charles Sweeney, 7109 Monticello Street, Pittsburgh, to the

MR. CHARLES SWEENEY

Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating the great natural medicine, Ten Herbs, to crowds of people. "Then I tried Ten Herbs, and it has given me such splendid results that I just cannot say enough for it," continued Mr. Sweeney, who has been a motorman for the Pittsburgh Street Railway Co. for four years.

"I had shooting pains all over my body—from head to foot. For several years I had been afflicted with stomach, liver, kidney and bowel trouble. I was so nervous and exhausted that I did not know what a good night's sleep was. I had not eaten with any real desire for a long time. When I did eat, I would feel miserable because of sour stomach, gas and stabbing pains. These pains would center in my right side and shoot around my shoulder blades. My bowels would not move without using a physic, and my liver was sluggish, causing headaches and dizzy spells. I was so badly rundown that I had no ambition to do anything.

"The statements in the daily papers, of local people who had been helped by Ten Herbs, induced me to try your medicine. Now I can honestly say that five bottles have made a new man of me. I can eat with pleasure, and do not suffer with that awful indigestion. There are no more pains or gas. My nerves are getting in good condition, and I sleep soundly. My bowels have become regular, and my liver and kidneys are working normally. Headaches and dizzy spells have disappeared. I have more pep, vigor and energy, and my work seems light and my spirits brighter. Ten Herbs has been such a boon for me, and will be for others, that I am glad to endorse it."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

18 SENIORS AT P. C. W. TO WED

The announcement that 28 per cent of the class of 1928 of the Pennsylvania College for Women are engaged to be married was taken in some quarters today as evidence that this year's graduates are the most attractive to men of any that the institution has turned out in at least six years. Research has not been pursued beyond that period.

Here are the facts on which the conclusion is based. The figures were disclosed at the senior banquets of the classes compared. On such occasions it is the custom for the betrothed girls to run around the table and display their engagement rings.

In 1923 five of the class of 37, or 14 per cent, were engaged; in 1924, four out of 39, or 11 per cent; in 1925, five out of 34, or 14 per cent; in 1926, 10 out of 50, or 20 per cent; in 1927, eight out of 65, or 12 per cent, and in 1928, 18 out of 64, or 28 per cent.

Pennsylvania College girls are celebrated for their attractiveness from the masculine viewpoint. Columbia University once inquired why P. C. W. had comparatively few students in Columbia's graduate schools, as compared with other colleges for women. President Cora Helen Coolidge answered that the reason was that Pennsylvania College girls married soon after graduation.

It is pointed out that while marriage keeps the girls from pursuing post-graduate studies, betrothal does not restrain them from graduating, for some of the class of 1928 at P. C. W. have been engaged for three or four years.

Among the young women who announced their engagement at the senior dinner are Miss Pearl Bigg, reader, and Miss Sarah Friedman, pianist, who will give a joint recital in the assembly hall of the college at 8:15 tonight.

Steamer Boarded at Sea and Marriage Performed by The Captain

Great Jollity on the High Seas

By ALFRED ALOYSIUS HORN

Edited by ETHELREDA LEWIS.

CHAPTER XLI.

I NOW went to see how Nina was doing and was surprised to see her asleep in her wet clothes. Do you think she can possibly be dead, he said, she has never breathed or moved? What? I said, never; I watched her closely, but the light was dim.

ALFRED A. HORN

Anyway I would do my best to restore her. I could not loose the neck of her dress which was rather too tight round the lower part of her neck so I pulled out my hunting knife and slit the neck and chest part open so as to give her fresh air if she was still in a faint.

I then gently placed my hand on her heart, which was beating away splendidly. I then put my ear close to her head and could hear her breathing quite regularly. Well, I said, what a rumor, she is breathing away quite splendidly, just as you would expect an angel to do, and her heart also is moving splendidly. I am a poor doctor, I said, but you are worse.

Her dress was now partially dry so I threw over ner a light eiderdown quilt and we left her in her deep sleep, closed the curtains and joined the crew. Can we speak now as loud as we like? the boys asked. Yes, but dont wake up all the river, just do as you wish as we shall not stop anywhere till we reach the sea. Renchoro now made up a good lunch for the boys and we all enjoyed it. And we followed this up by tots and smokes. I gave the crew a cigar each and told them to make merry and as long as they did not get drunk could have all the good liquor they wanted.

They had done their part of the carrying off of the Godess in great style and I was proud of them. This greatly pleased them and they commenced to sing in a low voice to the music of the Engombi which sounded lovely on the water.

The wind now freshened and the first dawn of morning was heralded by the twitter and moving of the birds. We passed Angola and were now heading for the open sea carried along at top speed by the river breeze which carried us to the mouth of the Ogowe by sunrise. Here we were met by a host of sea birds and other welcome visitors.

The change from the river to the sea was delightful and the boat seemed to catch the feeling of those who were aboard her and rode like a duck on the swell which increased as we neared the ocean.

I now peered into the cabin and Nina was still asleep. I pulled the curtain aside so as to give her fresh air. We passed the Vampire Island where we removed our hats as this was a white man's burial ground. I explained to Peru, but he never knew the real truth or the godess either as to who slept there. I looked at her as she slept. No sculpter could have added to her beauty.

Next we were riding the big swells and in less than an hour's time we rode the breakers, then after a spin through calm waters we entered the beautiful hidden cove near the Whale Rock. This woke her ladyship who, peering out, was surprised to see the beautiful grove on one hand and the ocean on the west.

The sea birds flocked around as I pitched my two camping tents in the shady grove near a beautiful clear spring and we soon made a home sweet home to be proud of.

Smart English Sport Models Reproduced for $6.60 All One Price

Actual photograph of exclusive English Sport Model on display in Regal Stores, purchased by us in London for 45 shillings $10.95 in London

Actual photograph of our Reproduction of exclusive English Model selling for $6.60 in all Regal Stores

Seen at Biarritz
Reproduced by Regal

OUR Style Scout saw this new model at Biarritz—the most fashionable watering place on the Continent. It was the most distinctive Sport Style worn at this "Playground of Royalty."

The valet of the titled Englishman who wore these shoes was proud of the fact that his Master's shoes were made by the best known maker of high grade shoes in England—and gave us the address.

This original sport model is made of Genuine White Buck trimmed with black or brown Calfskin. It is known as "Ball Strap" pattern, which is useful as well as decorative, as it prevents the Buckskin vamp from spreading across the ball of the foot. The rough, springy light crepe rubber sole prevents slipping.

The Regal Reproduction follows the original model even in such small details as the Calfskin quarter lining, eyelets and the suede-lined tongue. The color combination and pattern are exactly the same, and the lasts are identical in measurement and appearance.

We purchased 36 pairs of the original English shoe so that we could show one genuine Biarritz model with our reproduction in 72 Regal stores from Coast to Coast. And we want you to compare these shoes in our windows today.

Whether you're a golfing nut, tennis fan or a yachting enthusiast, or simply want to put on a pair of white flannels and doll up for the Boardwalk or the Club Verandah, we have a wide variety of styles for your selection in the Greatest Sport Line of shoes in America.

MABEL, Princess HOHENLOHE-SCHILLINGSFURST, the former MABEL TAYLOR of Philadelphia.

"Like a lot of people, I've often remarked that all cigarettes tasted much alike to me. But I found, through this blindfold test, that this is far from true.

"As I smoked the four brands, one after another, there was one that was conspicuously different. It was smoother and had a much more delightful aroma.

"I found after the test was over that this was an OLD GOLD. It really is a delightful cigarette."

Gifts' Values Not All-Important—Fay King

By FAY KING

ONE girl's best beau may send her roses every day!

Another girl's may bring her a small box of inexpensive chocolates when he calls on Wednesday evenings.

The difference between the devotion of these two young men for the girls they love is merely a matter of money.

The one who cannot afford to send the roses every day maybe wishes he could send orchids.

The wish for wealth in this world is mostly based on the good things it can buy for those we love!

All sweethearts would lay the world in the lap of the one they love!

It is often to gratify their girls' unreasonable longings for luxury that foolish young men enter into a life of crime.

But the girl who really loves a boy looks on his gifts, however small, for the true worth of their sentiment and not for their money value.

She realizes that it is often more of a real sacrifice on the part of a young man with little money and many responsibilities to give an inexpensive token of his love, than it is for the young man of wealth to give a costly gift.

17 PITTSBURGHERS WIN COMMISSIONS AT TECH

Seventeen Pittsburghers are included in the 37 seniors who will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Officers' Reserve Corps of the U. S. Army when graduated from Carnegie Institute of Technology, June 5. Local students to be commissioned are: J. L. Austraw, J. M. Barker, R. E. Bayne, P. M. Geist, H. L. Grau, J. A. Hagan, T. E. Hlavac, J. W. Jackson, Jr., H. M. Kandell, C. F. McKees, S. A. McMillion, S. A. McMullan, E. B. Ross, G. L. Starr and F. D. Woods, Engineer unit; J. S. Bagshman and C. J. Johnston, Signal Corps unit.

GIRLS SELECTED TO CHRISTEN BALLOONS

The "christening committee" for the national balloon races at Bettis Field on Memorial Day was announced today by Miss Anne King Scott, of Devon road, chairman.

Miss Scott named as her colleagues for the big air derby five other young women prominent in society circles. They are Miss Mary McClung, of Murrayhill avenue; Miss Catherine Gordon, of Shady avenue; Miss Elizabeth George, of Sewickley; Miss Virginia Goldsbury, of Sewickley, and Miss Betty Scott, of Devon road.

They will christen six of the 14 huge gas bags that will vie for the Litchfield trophy. If champagne is available, the balloons will be christened with that traditional liquid. Otherwise, ginger ale will be depended upon.

The first of the pilots arrived yesterday—Carl K. Wollam, pilot, and James F. Cooper, aide. They hope to carry the City of Cleveland balloon to one of the three winning places. Wollam and Cooper arrived early to arrange for the landing of The Pilgrim, the world's smallest airship, which the Goodyear interests will fly here for the races.

The Army and Navy teams, which will fly five balloons, are expected Sunday night. Their balloons reach Bettis Field tomorrow.

BLOW-TORCH EXPLOSION KILLS LEETSDALE MAN

Samuel R. Stephens, 37, of the Leetsdale Hotel, Leetsdale, died yesterday at the Sewickley Valley Hospital of burns suffered when a gasoline blow-torch he was using exploded.

Hospitals Must Get Permits to Move Alcohol

Prohibition authorities today notified District Attorney S. H. Gardner that confiscated grain alcohol cannot be distributed to 21 hospitals of the city, as planned, until these institutions have obtained permits for transporting and receiving the liquor. Each hospital is to get five 15-gallon cans. The order will hold up delivery of the alcohol for several days, it was said.

HIT BY ELECTRIC WIRE, WOMAN ASKS $60,000

Because of injuries she received when struck by an electric wire, Mrs. Catherine Donnelly, of 1339 Fifth avenue, asks $60,000 in a suit she filed against the Duquesne Light Company in Common Pleas Court yesterday. Mrs. Donnelly set forth that on January 24, when Duquesne workmen were removing a pole from the rear of her home, a wire became loose and struck her.

ENGINEER CRUSHED, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Hershell Hutchinson, 46, of Uniontown, a passenger engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, died in the Allegheny General Hospital early today of injuries suffered when he was crushed between a locomotive cab and an iron pole in the Twenty-eighth street railroad yards.

FIND STILL IN SECRET CELLAR AT ALIQUIPPA

AMBRIDGE, Pa., May 25.—County officers raiding the home of Mrs. Talka Laubin, 116 Park road, found two cellars, the lower of which held a 25-gallon still, 10 gallons of moonshine and six barrels of mash. Mrs. Laubin was held for court.

We all had a good time for the first day and as the spot was charming we decided to stay for one more day before we sailed for Fernandez Vaz where we were sure to meet passing vessels bound north.

Tossing for Nina

The evening was spent in merry-making, during which I thought I would settle once and for all with Nina the question of who she liked best, but to all my questions she insisted on refusing to make a choice.

Of course, she said, she loved us both as much as a woman could, especially as we both had risked our lives for her, in fact she had never dreamed any man would do so much for her and now she felt absolutely free she would never leave us. I then explained to her that she could choose without choosing. And showed her a sovereign.

I then called Renchoro and we tossed for coins, sometimes he won, sometimes I won. I then invited her to toss the coin, and after a while she managed it quite nicely, but insisted on laughing, but she understood what we were doing.

I then told her that this was quite fair, and asked her if she was willing to toss for myself and Peru and of course she would be the wife of whoever won forever. She smiled and said if you two men are willing so am I.

I led her to the camp fire and told all hands to form a ring. I also told Peru to come up. I explained to him what was going to happen, and Renchoro explained to the rest. The best cider down covers were brought, the lanterns were all lit and the fires replenished, making the old grove look more homelike. Take off your hat and lay it down brother and shake. We shook hands on the deal.

I levelled out the sand and handed the gold piece to the smiling Godess of high degree. You shout, I cried to Peru, are you ready.

Amongst the murmuring and now excited circle of men she tossed up the piece and strange to say it fell in the sand plum as it could possibly be. No toss, I cried. Peru agreed and she laughed heartily while a murmur of appreciation went 'round the human ring. I levelled the ground off and this time I padded it well down. She held the coin ready. Your shot said Peru. I called tales. This time she made a beautiful spin; it fell heads up.

Fate Decides

Great cheers went the air and re-echoed. I pretended to groan and again the noisy merriment went 'round whilst the lady who was now leaning on the shoulder of her husband was all laughter and smiles. Fate, the great master of men's destinies, had decided.

I now shook hands with my best mate on earth and complimented him on his luck. And I could see he felt both grateful and happy. All he said was Luck was surely in and I thank dame fortune with all my heart. I ordered the best we had to be brought from the locker and we drank bumpers one after another to the success of the happy pair.

Music was now king. Nina sang whilst the Ngombi and harp rang out to the voices of the happiest crowd on earth. We kept going all night and the sun was high when we awoke. We now had a good hearty meal and took our usual swim, whilst Perus lady took her usual dive higher up the beach with several of the Ncombi women who had come in to enjoy the fun. We all dressed our best to celebrate this memorable occasion.

After dinner Peru and his bride took a stroll, but they had not been long away when the man with the field glasses yelled ship's smoke to the south. I quickly climbed the tree, and there far away southerd I could surely see the smoke of a steamer, but I could not even see the smoke stack. She was far away and we would have plenty of time to catch her if we got ready at once.

I ordered Renchoro for the last time to make all speed and pack our goods securely and place them where they would be handy for removal should we be fortunate in boarding the steamer.

I fired a rifle twice to hasten back Peru and his intended and they came running at top speed wanting to know what had happened. I told him, he was now all excitement packing up and leaving the tents standing, after telling Renchoro they were his to keep. We were soon all aboard. After jumping the breakers we quickly set sail and using both paddles and sail we were soon in sight of the big boat.

Homeward Bound

I fired a volley to call their attention and immediately the signal ran up. The vessel was now plainly visible. She had seen us and had changed her course to meet us, I told Renchoro I would leave him the boat and all on board it as he had been so faithful to me. I gave him a good hug. He said he would always help me if I ever returned.

I thanked him we were now alongside all was ready for boarding Her. The vessel had now slowed up. I explained who we were and what we needed. Come on board I have good accommodations and as I am bound direct for Funchal Madeira you have just hit me in the right place.

Our luggage was soon aboard. Nina went first and her husband followed. I shouted best luck to my faithful boys who had been with me through hard scenes. The boat swung clear. And the boys and Renchoro were still waving good luck as long as I could see them. I now joined my friends who were already in their cabin. Peru had engaged the small dining room, smoke room and two best cabins, which were delightfully situated and up to date in every way.

Who is that beautiful looking lady we have the pleasure of having as a passenger, he asked? Well captain she will be that fellow's wife as soon as you can marry them. Here he laughed outright.

We sat down and he was still smiling. I took a French brandy with him and he told me to get ready for it was a lucky event crossing the line, he said. I then saw Peru and Nina and told them. Oh, of course, he said, if the captain would be so good.

The Captain and mate now appeared with the necessary books and pens. I hurried Peru up and he appeared with the Bride who looked her best, they both came up smiling. She wore a necklace of pearls with a beautiful diamond and emerald brooch. After the necessary documents had been signed the Captain pronounced the words love, honor and obey. I translated for the bride whose English was rutty and they answered I will. I signed as witness, the smiling mate followed suit and it was all over.

A legal marriage under the British flag said the good Captain. The mewing sea birds circled round and presently the brass bow gun boomed out, we were crossing the line the necessary marriage papers were made out (marriage certificates) and Peru and his Lady shook hands with the officers.

I told Peru, who was wearing his best smile, not to forget the crew. Oh of course not, he said, and handed me a roll of banknotes, you know all about these things so you must help me out. You have done splendidly.

I called the captain and frankly told him what Peru had said. Oh, the captain said, it is not really necessary but give what you wish. I handed him a fifty for all hands. Oh no, he said, quite out of the way, 10 will be ample. I made him accept 20 pounds, he called the steward and told him to share it out. And he thanked me on behalf of his crew.

We had the wedding breakfast and the good cook had not forgotten the cake, which we really enjoyed. Peru spent much of his time teaching his wife how to improve her writing and reading and we had many a good laugh at the comical words she would scribble, whilst she thoroughly enjoyed the fun. We had a trip to Madeira which was always full of enjoyable incidents.

MISS MOBILE, '26 HELD IN ARSON

MEDIA, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—Mrs. Vivian Page, who was "Miss Mobile" in the 1926 Atlantic City beauty pageant, today is held here for court, without bail, on a charge of arson growing out of a fire at the Norma apartments, May 9.

After she had been held yesterday by Magistrate F. T. Cooper, she was rearrested on a charge involving the passing of worthless checks and was taken before Magistrate A. C. W. Mathues and held for a further hearing.

Frank Morganthal, who told the police that he had driven the young woman from New York to Media, was held in connection with the arson charge against her.

Chat About Grandmother Flapper of the Stage and Productions in Theaters, Current and Coming

Fannie Ward, Going Strong At Sixty, Says It's Crime For Women to Grow Old

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

I CALLED on Fannie Ward, backstage of the Stanley, remained a scant 15 minutes and threw off 10 years. I did not go for that purpose—to learn any secrets of long life. I did not go merely for an "interview"—it was something more than that—it was homage. During the McKinley administration I, one day, was near the home of a woman more than 100 years old. I knew she had learned to ride a bicycle at 99. I did not know her, but her youthful spirit attracted me to her, and I went to pay my respects. I found her about recovered from a broken leg, suffered in a fall, eager for the day when she could mount her bicycle again. Couldn't you revere a woman like that?

It was in something of that spirit of reverence that I visited Fannie Ward, after having seen her, a grandmother, 60, prancing on the stage like a member of a "pony" ballet. I heard her youthful voice singing a song in which she told Father Time that he could not call at her home. I saw her girlish figure and doll-like features and could not associate them with anything like more than half a century of life nor with the alloted three-score-and-ten of existence, now only 10 years distant for her.

So I was somewhat awed when I went to call on her. Yet not to be deluded. Willing to admit her spirit and vim were worthy of a respectful bow, but mindful of the fact that paint and make-up often lend enchantment to the view, as far as actresses are concerned. No, I was not to be deluded by feminine tricks, but you will be fooled if you think Fannie Ward is not as youthful looking "close up" as she is at a distance. With a small, smooth, round face, clear, bright eyes that show not the first indication of receding before the advance of time, she could easily claim to be only half her age and not be suspected of taking advantage of the feminine prerogative of hiding a few years.

I expected to ask a few questions, get a few interesting little facts and to make a story from them. Instead of being "interviewer" I was "interviewed." After the formalities she remarked that I appeared very healthy, assuming that because of that I must necessarily diet. I murmured something about having a too-tricky stomach for years, and—

"Ha," she laughed, "you've come to the right place—Doctor Fannie, they call me. I've helped many friends. I'll bet you eat lots of bread."

But why detail all the conversation? It will only develop, among other things, the fact that Fannie Ward hasn't eaten bread in 20 years. She doesn't eat meat, potatoes nor sugar. She doesn't shun coffee nor tea, but she simply forgot the sugar bowl years ago and now she says she does not even know whether one is on the table. I am not going to tell all the things she recommends to eat, but she is quite a "fan" on raw foods, like lettuce, cabbage, onions and carrots. One of her favorite dishes is grated raw carrot and lettuce. Fruits and some nuts are favored, too.

"Thirty years ago," she said, "I was playing in London and I got into such a condition that I could not go on. Carlsbad then was a famous 'cure' so I went to Carlsbad. I saw a noted doctor and he asked me if I ate much bread. I told him I loved it and ate a lot of it. He said I was full of little stones and poison from what I ate. Anyway, I got fixed up and I haven't eaten bread from that day to this."

But it is not diet alone on which Miss Ward depends. Keep the system free from poisons through internal cleansing, she says, and there is no reason why persons with no organic troubles need not live to be a hundred.

"I have to keep fit," she said. "Doing four shows a day and taking care of a lot of correspondence and details involved in my profession and in having a house in New York, one in London and another in Paris, requires that I keep myself in good health."

"Are you not tired after the last show?"

"Seldom. Do you know what's good to pep you up? A small piece of ice in a towel. Rub it all over your face and forehead, around your neck and shoulders. Nothing like it, ha, ha."

And why do all this? The question, not asked, was answered:

"With all the youth and beauty surrounding men these days, it is a crime for any married woman to grow old through neglect. Of course, some women don't care what their husbands do, so it is all right for them, but some of us like our husbands and want to keep them, so we have to stay young, ha, ha, to meet the competition."

Yes, I got something for a "story," too.

She loves to dance socially. Seventeen years ago on her last visit to Pittsburgh, she received several "mash" notes from the same person, paying no attention to them. Then one with a threat to shoot her from a box of the theater. The police got him.

UNDERWORLD :-: SOME BABIES HERE :-: WESTERN

Thomas Meighan is a police captain and his leading woman, Marie Prevost, is an underworld girl in Meighan's new picture, "The Racket."

Bebe Daniels found this scene for her new picture, "Hot News," more amusing "than a three-ring circus." The star is surrounded by babies of all colors at a baby show held in a Los Angeles park especially for her photoplay.

Bishop's daughter, horse and Sally Blane, in cowgirl's outfit. The other lass is Winnie Jones, who plays as an extra in "The Vanishing Pioneer."

Screen Comedian Hires German Community

An entire German community in Southern California moved to First National studios en masse to participate in scenes for Harry Langdon's current starring vehicle, "Here Comes the Band." These scenes showed the Germans gathered in a bake shop of one of their countrymen, where the star is presented with a medal for valor.

Langdon, with his usual desire for authentic types, hired the whole German village and on the screen there is no doubt as to the nationality of Baker Adolph von Hauser's friends.

Carewe Discovers "Gyps" Among Gypsies

When Edwin Carewe announced he would film a gypsy story and started work on "Revenge," starring Dolores Del Rio, thousands of people stood outside the gates of the studios, all claiming to be gypsies and eager to lend a helping hand in the production.

"There might possibly be 100 real gypsies in Southern California," says Carewe, "but the other thousands are just plain 'gyps,' eager for work."

Veteran Actress Cast In Two Pictures

Mary Alden, for years respected and admired for her ability as an actress and her fine qualities as a woman, has begun a triple life, it was revealed at the Paramount studio.

Officials of the studio disclosed that Miss Alden is spending a portion of her time keeping her home in order; a second portion as "Soft Annie," a hard-boiled character in Clara Bow's "Ladies of the Mob;" and the rest as a dying mother in Esther Ralston's starring picture, "Sawdust Paradise."

Miss Alden's time already was well occupied with her role in "Ladies of the Mob," but director Luther Reed decided Mary Alden, and only Mary Alden could play a certain mother role in "Sawdust Paradise." So the schedules of the two productions have been arranged in such a way as to accommodate both.

Conrad Sea Story Colman's Next Photoplay

"The Rescue," by Joseph Conrad, has been selected by Samuel Goldwyn as the first picture in Ronald Colman's career as an independent star. Consequently, plans for Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," already announced, have been postponed.

Joseph Conrad spent 20 years in the writing of "The Rescue" and always represented it as the favorite of his many stories of the sea. Herbert Brenon, who directed Colman in "Beau Geste," will direct "The Rescue" at the Goldwyn studio.

Lily Damita, "the golden girl from Paris," who arrived in Hollywood last week to begin her American screen career under Mr. Goldwyn's direction, will appear opposite Colman in Conrad's story.

Colleen Moore in Sea Sequences Of Picture

Colleen Moore is rapidly becoming a regular seagoing salt.

For as soon as she returns from her ocean trip to Honolulu, where she has been vacationing since the completion of her latest picture, "Happiness Ahead," she will pack her duffle-bag and go abroad a palatial sailing yacht, which will be used as the background for several sequences in her next starring vehicle, "Oh, Kay!"

The scenario for this picture, which Carey Wilson adapted from the musical comedy success, calls for several weeks of camera work aboard the yacht. Consequently, Miss Moore, Producer John McCormick, Director Mervyn LeRoy and the cast and technical staff will spend part of the summer season cruising off Southern California.

STOCKS OFFER NEW PLAYS

The presentation of "Mary's Other Husband" in the Pitt Theater next week, will give the George Sharp players comedy roles. "Mary's Other Husband," by Larry E. Johnson, was produced by Earl Carroll in Wallack's Theater, New York, last winter.

"The Baby Cyclone," next week's offering of the Nixon Players in the Nixon, will be seen here for the first time in stock following its success in the Henry Miller Theater, New York, where it was produced by its author, George M. Cohan.

The clothes that make a man and sometimes wreck a woman is the theme of "The Play Girl," the photoplay announced for the Davis next week. Ida May Chadwick and her Six Dizzy Blondes will top the bill of Keith-Albee vaudeville.

Movie Players in American Debuts

Three new screen players are making American debuts in 1928 in leading roles in United Artists' pictures.

Camilla Horn, 19 years old, and only known through her appearance opposite Emil Jannings in "Faust," is to be seen for the first time in an American picture in her role of Princess Tamara in Barrymore's "Tempest."

Walter Byron, young English actor commended by Ronald Colman to Samuel Goldwyn in England, makes his American screen debut opposite Vilma Banky in "The Awakening."

LeRoy Mason, American youth discovered by Edwin Carewe in a Hollywood restaurant, begins his film career as leading man for Dolores del Rio in "Revenge."

These three beginners in American films follow in the footsteps of Lupe Velez and Merna Kennedy. Last year Lupe Velez, who had been seen only in one Hal Coach comedy, played opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho." Now Miss Velez is to be co-featured with William Boyd in "La Paiva," under direction of Samuel Taylor. Merna Kennedy had never appeared on the screen before Charlie Chaplin cast her as his leading lady in "The Circus."

Our factory direct to You

WE NOT only save you the middleman's profit—but we give you better style, richer quality, greater value than you have ever found in clothes sold at $22.50, or a price near that figure. As the world's largest manufacturing retailers of men's clothes, we purchase fine woolens at tremendous savings, and effect important economies through the scientific volume production methods employed in our own unrivaled factories.

Our newly enlarged store is now serving the men of Pittsburgh and vicinity in greater number than ever before—and serving them better. The extra space provided when we purchased the lease of our next-door neighbor makes it possible to show double our former stocks. Here you will see greater variety at one price than others show at all prices combined. And our sales force has also been greatly increased to make sure that every man receives prompt, courteous and intelligent service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HER SUICIDAL INTENT

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

FREDA MAIN was tired of living. She said so.

"Another disgusting day!" is what she said to herself every morning, when she opened her eyes.

There was really no good reason why Freda should wish to die; and no especial reason why she should wish to live. She had no particular trouble, she had no ill-health nor family skeleton to weigh her down. On the other hand, she had no work to interest her; no wealth that would enable her to go places and see things and saddest of all—she had no sweetheart—and never had had. Freda was just an everyday, small town girl. The boys with whom she had gone to school had either married or else they had gone away to the cities. Now at the age of 25 she found herself without a profession, without a job, without anything except a comfortable home and a nagging mother.

"Someday I'm going to end it all," she whispered to herself time after time. She continued to entertain that idea until it took a strong hold upon her mind.

One day she saw an aviator in the Village cafe. She heard him talking to another man sitting opposite him at the table.

"If I had some plucky girl to make this trip with me," he was say, "we could capitalize the publicity that she'd get and make some money when we returned to this hero-worshipping United States.

"Find the girl," laughed the man," and I'll get the publicity."

"My suicidal chance," whispered Freda. "If I go that way, it will spare the family name. Nobody will ever know that I wanted to be killed."

On the impulse of the moment she walked across to the table and spoke to the aviator.

"I'd like to make that flight with you," she stated.

The two men looked up in surprise. The pilot gave her a searching glance.

"You may never come back, you know," he warned her. "You are taking a chance. I am making a non-stop flight to Brazil."

"I'm willing to take the chance," she replied.

"All right. I'm scheduled to leave here any time now. If you really want to go, I'll take you."

Freda's eyes danced. She had been up in an airplane once, and she had gloried in her flight. She forgot that she wanted to die. She forgot everything except the adventure that was beckoning to her. She scribbled a note to her mother; ran across the street to a dry goods store and provided herself with the necessary togs; slipped on the cap which the aviator gave her and walked with the two men to the landing field a short distance away—leaving the gaping townspeople staring after her.

Before she had time to realize the foolishness of her escapade she was flying south in Harlston Blake's plane.

They had crossed the Rio Grande River and were circling over the high peaks of Central America, when they spied another plane. Blake looked at it for a moment, then called Freda's attention to it.

The girl picked up the field glasses and looked. Then she saw the distant plane whirl and start downward.

"It's falling!" she screamed.

"God!" was all that Blake said.

Harlston Blake headed straight toward the scene of distress.

"He's landing in the tree tops!" shrieked Freda.

A short time later, Blake landed in an open space near the wrecked plane. He and Freda started on a run toward the accident.

They found the pilot clinging to the lower branches of a giant oak, his disabled plane smashed on the ground below.

Blake lifted him down and laid him on the grass. The poor fellow groaned and then lapsed into unconsciousness.

His face and hands were scratched and bleeding, his clothes were torn and his breath came in short gasps that indicated some internal injury.

Blake opened his emergency kit, and Freda got busy. If there was any one thing in the world which she could do better than most people it was nursing. She took charge of the situation as though that were the reason for her coming to this deserted spot.

It was a whole week, before the injured man came out of his stupor. During that time, Freda watched and worked and prayed for his recovery. It was Blake who kept the camp fire burning, brought the water from a nearby spring, built a temporary shelter and supplied the game for food. It was also Blake who discovered that the patient's papers bore the name of Bixby Grant.

Not once during that week did Freda think of her suicidal intent. The only thing on earth that mattered to her was the recovery of this young stranger, whose life now seemed to depend upon her care.

At last Bixby Grant was well enough to be carried back to civilization. And Harlston Blake undertook to transport him to the safe side of the Rio Grande.

Twenty-four hours later, attendants at a Texan hospital lifted Grant from the plane, and carried him to the infirmary. Then and only then did Freda relax her vigilance. She was almost ready to collapse by that time; but she held on to herself until she sent a message to her mother. For two days afterward she lay in bed with an ice pack on her head.

When she was well enough to visit the injured aviator in the hospital she found him propped up in the pillows.

She spoke to him with a glad note in her voice.

"My angel!" he whispered as she came to the bedside.

She gave him a questioning glance, and he continued.

"Throughout my illness, I kept seeing a certain face and hearing a certain comforting voice. Then they brought me here and I lost them both. I thought it was just a fancy of my delirium, but now I know it was you."

When Harlston Blake resumed his flight to Brazil, he resumed it alone. Freda told him she had decided to return home. And return home she did.

Just exactly a month later Bixby Grant walked up the rose-bordered path at the Main's home.

Freda saw him coming and met him at the door. There was a light in his eyes that she had never seen in any man's eyes before. There was a tenderness in his voice that she had never heard from any one before. There was a comfort in his arms of which she had never dreamed.

TO AID LEPROSY FUND HERE

Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Bullard, with Mrs. H. Windsor Wade, will come to Pittsburgh next Monday as guests of the local committee of the Leonard Wood Memorial Fund for the Eradication of Leprosy.

At a reception given by Mrs. Terrell Johnson at her home, 5505 Forbes street, Monday night, Gen. Bullard will give reminiscences of Gen. Wood, and Mrs. Wade, who is the wife of the chief physician at Culion, leper colony of the Philippines, will describe the work there. A nation-wide campaign is under way to raise $2,000,000 to fight the age-old scourge.

KAUFMANN'S AIRCRAFT EXHIBIT

Beginning To-Morrow in Our Eleventh Floor Auditorium

To-morrow morning Pittsburgh will get its first glimpse of our Aircraft Exhibit, an exposition of aeronautics such as the city has never before seen. There will be scores of interesting displays to hold your attention, to unravel air facts that were mysteries to you before. There will be a full-sized plane, a pilot's testing chair being actually demonstrated, an inflated balloon and many other equally interesting displays. Moving picture films will be shown at ten in the mornings and at one in the afternoons. More than 40 firms have given us their cooperation in arranging this most unique showing we have ever featured. And every one has contributed a display of sure-fire appeal.

Also a Demonstration of Television and Telephotography

In our Radio Department, on the Eleventh Floor, you will be shown how it is possible to transmit photographs by wire, regardless of distance. And you will see how two persons separated by great distances can converse and see each other at the same time.

TOGETHER AGAIN

Once each year, Downtown Kiwanis Club is host, around Memorial Day, to the "Boys in Blue"—those of them who are left. Here, at the Fort Pitt Hotel luncheon, are J. M. Brunton, Raymond Estley, J. V. Brook and Jacob J. Soles.

G. A. R. HEAD

J. B. Patrick (left), department commander, state of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Grand Army of the Republic; H. J. Westerman, George Ryan, John T. McGuire, and George J. Rudolph refought several battles. It was a grand old war, they seem to think.

ENTERTAINMENT

Fred Strawmacher, John C. Ebler, H. M. Foulkner and M. R. Cross were there, you bet! The Kiwanians furnished entertainment for the boys and everyone had a rip-roaring time. About 125 veterans from Western Pennsylvania attended.

THE CONSTANT FLAME

A Fair Maid Meets Love In Strange Surroundings

Emily Doesn't Believe That A Thoroughbred Would Act Like Kent's Sister

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and her flaming sister, Kitten, are daughters of a worker at the Rossiter factory. Emily, in high school, makes an ideal of Kent Rossiter and is greatly worried at her inability to mingle with the socially elect. Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is attentive to Emily. He risks his life to gather some leaves for her and presents her with an Airedale. Emily forms a friendship with rich Mrs. Halden, an interior decorator, who talks color and beauty to her and impresses upon her that the only aristocracy is that of work. Emily feels that her destiny is in her own hands. Day helps foment a strike. Emily persuades Mr. Rossiter to take him back as they are starving, but Day takes his good luck in the wrong spirit. Kent introduces her to his sister, who snubs her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

EMILY stammered "Indeed!" though her lips were numb. She ran into the school building, straight up the stairs, past the recitation rooms, to a little cupola storeroom where no one ever came. There she sank to her knees before a window that looked out over the river toward the Tarrytown hills.

Leaving next year . . . Kent . . . She kept moving that in her mind, trying to make it mean something. Next year she would come back here; she would sit over in the sophomore section where he had been, perhaps have his very desk. And he would be gone.

Tall, merry boy, turning to her with his smile, dropping funny little notes. Waiting for her at the elm by the corner, bending down to say some teasing thing. No more!

Out into the world now; he was going away to school. College afterward—years before he'd come again. He'd have forgotten her then. Just a girl he knew once, went to school with when both were kids.

Only she would remember, here where all things reminded her of him. Go on remembering always . . . turn down an empty glass. . . ."

The hills across the river dimmed and merged with purple shadows; lights sprang out and lay like a scattering of jewels on a length of dark chiffon. Emily knew all at once that the night chill had cramped her muscles and penetrated her heart.

She came slowly down through the deserted building and made her way home. There she went about meekly, helping Agnes, fussing over Steve who had gone back to his couch and spent most of his time lying very still.

And what she had heard that afternoon was like a wound throbbing deep in her mind.

There came a bit of diversion when the whole class room was invited to the Rossiters for a farewell party. Emily didn't want to attend at first; she was stricken with shyness at the thought of going into Kent's home, seeing him there, perhaps meeting his father and mother.

She told Frances Halden a little of this.

"Of course you're going," Mrs. Halden declared. "Sheer cowardice not to. Don't ever become self-conscious, Emily; that's only egotism turned upside down. Is Agnes busy these days? Too busy to do a little sewing?"

She began to rummage in a drawer, brought up some light, filmy stuff. "We'll make it with flounces and you'll wear a gilt rose at the shoulder. You will look very lovely, my dear."

It turned out to be something like the frock she had wished for her first party at Anne Morrow's so long ago. Only that was to have been like a daffodil, but this was paler and sweeter, rather more a hollyhock in the way pale gold frills dropped about her slenderness over stockings and slippers Mrs. Halden had tinted faint green.

She walked sedately out River road, but when she turned in at the gateway of Highcliffe all her senses quivered to an exquisite excitement. She stood a moment with her hands to her throat, trying to make her heart stop knocking so. She had an absurd illusion that Kent would be waiting, coming down the steps to meet her, smiling in the dim light.

But it was the Jap butler who let her in and directed her to the room where girls were leaving their wraps. A maid offered powder and rouge which she refused, and sent her to the drawing room downstairs.

Kent was by the door, tall and buoyant, handsome as a young god in black and white. He took both her hands, stared a moment, gave her a quick, winning smile.

"Never realized you were a raving beauty, Em. Look as if you'd stepped off a magazine cover. You know Avis?"

(To be Continued Tomorrow.)

SECOND NEWS SECTION — THE SUN-TELEGRAPH — SPORTS FEATURES

FRIDAY, MAY 25, 1928

REV. URMY 3RD IN M.E. DEADLOCK

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 25.—Election or defeat of a Pittsburgh clergyman as a Methodist Episcopal bishop should be known today. The Rev. Dr. Ralph B. Urmy, pastor of the Bellevue, Pa., congregation, stood third on the fifteenth ballot, last vote counted, when the deadlocked Methodists' quadrennial General Conference resumed its session today.

A swing toward Dr. Hartman was shown on the fifteenth ballot. He received 257 votes, 62 more than on the previous ballot. Mr. Bugbee, who followed Dr. Hartman closely with 229 votes, withdrew from the contest.

The deadlock occurred after selection of two of the three bishops to be chosen.

Two new bishops have been elected. A third remains to be elected.

The situation is not merely a political one. It was given a deeply religious turn last night by the Rev. Orien W. Fifer of Indianapolis, chairman of the committee on episcopacy.

"Shall we say to our people," Dr. Fifer demanded, "that the Holy Spirit is not with us? That our hearts have not been touched? That we have been unable to obtain divine guidance? and that therefore we quit?"

The question put an effective quietus upon what, up to that time, had been repeated efforts to have the balloting discontinued.

"We have elected two bishops. The conference is costing $50 a minute. Lets not waste any more time. Let's be satisfied with the two and let the third go," was the gist of the argument in that respect.

The method of balloting itself is conducive to a deadlock, it was pointed out in several quarters. "Nominations" are not in order. The delegates simply write the name of the man—any man—they think best fitted for the office, upon their ballots. A two-third's vote is necessary to a choice.

DO YOU KNOW HIM?

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

Dost know by sight this man? Perhaps you do, perhaps you don't, and if you do perhaps you're wrong. He's a possible candidate for the presidency of the United States as convention dates draw nearer. There isn't here the slightest hint of his identity. The Sun-Telegraph is printing a series of "possible candidates," Democratic and Republican and otherwise, always withholding the name until the following day. This man's name tomorrow!

THURSDAY'S "POSSIBLE CANDIDATE" WAS SENATOR WALTER F. GEORGE, GEORGIA, DEMOCRAT.

PROBE RUM WITNESS THREATS

While the Federal grand jury is having a five-day recess, following today's session, special government officers will investigate reports reaching Federal officials of attempts made to intimidate persons summoned to testify in the rum conspiracy probe. Many attempts have been made, according to reports, to hamper persons under subpenas from giving the grand jury testimony concerning ramifications of bootleg liquor rings in various parts of the city.

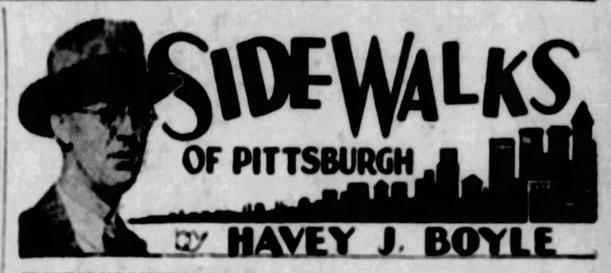
It was learned this morning that government officials in back of the sweeping investigation of illicit liquor traffic in Pittsburgh contemplate bringing charges of perjury against a number of witnesses who have appeared before the grand jury. In some instances, according to reports, witnesses have been given another opportunity to appear before the grand jury before criminal action is brought against them.

More than 250 witnesses from the downtown, Hill and "Strip" wards were excused this morning until the grand jury reconvenes next Thursday. Sixty-five from East End wards were held today for questioning.

No return by the grand jury is anticipated before June 8. When the probe is resumed May 21, there will be waiting for it more than 300 witnesses now under subpena, most of them from East Liberty, Homewood, Brushton, Squirrel Hill and Bloomfield. Before recessing today the grand jury will hear some witnesses from East Liberty and the West End.

OHIO TOT FALLS INTO SWAMP; BODY FOUND

UHRICHSVILLE, O., May 25.—After a four-hour search the body of David Scott, 4, was found yesterday in a swamp on the farm of his father, Lyle Scott. The child is believed to have fallen from a footbridge.



PITTSBURGHERS of this day associate Eddie Bald's name with automobiles, from which field he retired a few years ago. Pittsburghers who were young men in the nineties associate Eddie Bald's name with something that to them seems more romantic, for Bald was a part of that scene of the nineties that the old-timers, with a just pride, seldom get tired talking about.

Eddie was talking about his bicycle racing the other day, bringing back the picture of the American scene when an automobile was pretty much of a novelty, and when bicycle-riding was one of the hot sports.

BALD started out as a boy rider in Buffalo. His forte was cracking the record for a mile. He was a champion rider over a stretch of four years, during which time he traveled from coast to coast taking part in racing and exhibitions. Once he went to Paris.

Living at the time when Bald was flourishing as a daring gentleman of the wheel you would have had much to entertain you beyond bicycle racing. You would have, for instance, been reading in the papers how an actual test showed that a man could talk over a telephone to another man 1,000 miles away. You would have been reading such books as "Janice Meredith," "Richard Carvel," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "David Harum," "The Bonnie Briar Bush," "Sorrow of Satan." Such men as Richard Harding Davis, George Ade and Finley Peter Dunne, were blowing the public over with their writings. Davis enthralled with stories of clean adventure; Ade was coining expressions that everyone picked up, and Dunne was having fun with all the prominent characters of the day.

WHEN Bald was in his prime one out of every 70 Americans owned a bicycle. There were outdoor and indoor tracks to take care of the races, with big crowds turning out. One year he was engaged by a bicycle firm that paid him $2,400 a year just to use its make of "bike."

A Buffalo boy of national prominence he moved from city to city. He recalls riding here on the Homewood track. He carried a trainer, whose principal job was to keep the precious legs that pedalled to thrill the multitudes in perfect shape.

From bike racing he graduated to automobile racing, but his enthusiasm for this was not high, and at last he settled into the business of selling autos.

SELLING an automobile in those days was a hard job. The salesmen were nearly all mechanics, as were the purchasers. It was the get-out and get-under period of automobiling, when a man who could not repair his own car would not think of venturing forth in it.

Garages were few and far between and for every half hour spent on the road, the owner spent two in preparing the car for another test of its running ability.

EDDIE recalls that none of the autos were equipped with windshields or tops, and remembers when the Bankers in Pittsburgh made windshields for practically every make of car.

Bald started riding on the type of "bike" which had a big wheel in front and a small one in the rear, a business that was accompanied by many bumps. He developed into a racer when, without much effort, he discovered that in impromptu races along the roads beyond Buffalo he had speed and strength.

EVERY year the old-time bike racers hold a convention to talk over the good old days.

BOBO BAXTER—Just As We Thought — By RUBE GOLDBERG

MOVIE TREAT FOR SUN-TELE BOYS

The Sun-Tele newsboys motion picture show will be held in Loew's Penn Theater at a quarter to nine tomorrow morning. All the thousands who every afternoon sell Pittsburgh's best newspaper, will see "Circus Rookies," featuring the famous clown pair, Karl Dane and George K. Arthur.

Other features will be included to make the party a pleasing one for the boys. L. Lanning, manager of the theater, and Henry H. Fris, director of circulation of the Sun-Telegraph, will meet the boys. There will be over 3,000 seats for the free show, and tickets are available from newsdealers or from the Sun-Telegraph circulation department.

The story centers around Karl Dane, who persistently applies for a job with the Bungling circus. How he tries, how he succeeded and what he does in the meanwhile creates a constant stream of laughs. All the lure and romance of a circus is the picture. Doors open at 8 o'clock.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

ONE of the local features over KDKA tonight will be a Kiwanis program. It will begin at 10:30 o'clock. There will be a review of war-time songs by the Kiwanis chorus, quartet and instrumental trio, under the leadership of Victor Saudek, director of the KDKA Little Symphony Orchestra. Bert Mustin will introduce some humor. A Memorial Day address will be given by the Rev. Albert E. Day, pastor of the Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Wrigley review at 9 o'clock will be one of KDKA's network features. A male quartet will sing "Carry On," "Sweet Sue" and "Wobbly Walk;" a duo will present "Bob White" and a comedy song, "For Instance;" a tenor soloist will sing "When My Ships Come Sailing Home;" "Dream River" will be heard as a contralto solo, and there will be several instrumental solos. The orchestra will play such selections as "Los Toros," from Lacome's "La Feria," "Moorish Dance Song," from Nicode's "Scenes from the South," and "Evening Shadows."

Meecham's "American Patrol," containing a number of good American military tunes, will be one of the "high spots" of the Red Network broadcast of the Whittall Anglo-Persians at 9 o'clock. It will be heard over WCAE. It will be opened with Strauss' composition, "Roses of the South," and will contain, in addition, Logan's "Pale Moon" and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

A feature of the Palmolive Hour, to be broadcast through the Red Network, including WCAE, at 10 o'clock, will be an especially arranged medley of Hungarian gypsy songs prepared by Director Gustav Haenschen for both orchestra and voice.

Paul Oliver, tenor, will be heard in "Ah, Moon of My Delight" and, with Olive Palmer, will sing a tenor-soprano duet—"Road to Paradise," from "Maytime," and, with one of the schoolgirl contraltos, the grand opera selection, "Home to Our Mountains," from "Il Trovatore." The Palmolive Revelers will be heard in the old favorite quartet melodies "The Girl Friend" and "Little Cotton Dolly." In addition there will be guitar and saxophone novelties as solos and with vocal accompaniment. The Palmolive Symphony Orchestra will render Massenet's ballet music from "Herodiade" and Olive Palmer will sing the colorful soprano solo, "Villanella," by Sibella. The ensemble will conclude the hour's entertainment with hits from the current Broadway hit, "Present Arms," which will be heard for the first time on the air on this evening.

Raymond Hitchcock, famous comedian, again will be featured as guest artist of the La Palina Smoker, which will be heard over WJAS and other Columbia Chain stations at 10 o'clock. There will be music by a symphony orchestra and instrumental and vocal soloists.

Physicians now warn:

"Inferior toilet papers are not safe"

Your own intelligence tells you: "Certainly bathroom paper should be specially made for its purpose."

Yet even today, these are facts: most toilet tissue is just ordinary tissue paper in rolls.

580 PHYSICIANS, recently questioned, agreed: "Inferior toilet papers are injurious." They may be glazed, impure, actually abrasive. For your family's sake never buy just any "toilet paper" again.

ScotTissue and Waldorf are famous special toilet tissues—made by special process on special machines.

They are definitely made to meet the three requirements doctors say toilet tissue must have: "Absorbency, Softness, Purity."

Scott tissues are so absorbent that they sink in water almost instantly. So soft and fine-textured, that, crumpled in the hand, they still are actually cloth-like, suave as old linen.

Unlike many toilet papers, they contain no reclaimed waste materials. And they are chemically pure—neither alkaline nor acid.

Be safe. Always ask for ScotTissue or Waldorf.

They fit all standard-size recess fixtures.

SCOTTISSUE—Pure white, delightfully fine and soft—like "old linen." 2 for 25c

WALDORF—Soft and absorbent, yet inexpensive. A fine toilet tissue any family can afford. 2 for 15c.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

MAN'S DANGEROUS MOMENT

LILITH was Adam's first wife—and he appears to have been perfectly content with her, until he discovered that she had "no soul."

That is what so many men discover, along about forty or forty-five, when they have made their fortunes, are able to afford two automobiles, and are not yet ready to take up golf as a life work.

* * *

Usually, the discovery that a wife has "no soul" comes about the time that her ankles are beginning to get a little thick, and she develops the first worry wrinkles around the eyes.

HELEN ROWLAND

Junking the old wife for something new and flashy with all the modern improvements, is getting to be almost a popular custom in these days of painless divorce, youth culture and sentimental restlessness.

In nine cases out of ten, the soulmate turns out to be far longer on dimples, knees, silk hosiery and lipstick than on SOUL. But it doesn't take much to convince a man who is bored with domesticity and tired of coffee kisses, that you and he are "mated in the luminous void."

When a wife (after ten or twenty years of walking the baby, getting the children off to school and putting mustard plasters on her husband) begins to get just a little harder on the eyes, she is apt to be a little harder on the nerves, too. And almost any fresh, virile, young thing who knows how to coo sympathetically into a man's ear can make him believe that he is "misunderstood" and there is "something lacking" in his life.

Homemade biscuits and hot dumplings used to be a guarantee of any husband's devotion. But flour-and-water paste no longer appears to stand a chance against lip rouge and applesauce, after a man's "soul" begins working.

Most of the time, this "mental companionship," which he fancies he has found, turns out to be merely a new brand of perfume, a new make of face-powder and a new line of flattery. But while the dalliance lasts, he will risk losing all that he has spent his life in building—his home, his life-mate and his dignity—for a little new thrill which he fondly thinks is a "spiritual experience."

It is just Nature's last protest against the drabness of approaching middle age. It is the glamor of Indian summer, the most dangerous hour in a man's life, when he is walking on the edge of a precipice and looking at the stars.

* * *

But instead of "junking the old wife" then, if ever, should he cling to her, until the fever has passed and his head is steady again.

A MIRRORED WISH

She Sees Her Own Lovely Self as Dan Cupid Sees Her

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

MANY centuries ago, so the story goes, in a tiny, inland Japanese village, mirrors were unknown. To determine their loveliness the maidens of the village perchance had to depend upon the flattering descriptions of their lovers. And then came a day when a native of the village chanced to see his reflection in a shiny, flat piece of metal he had picked up in the fields. Immediately he thought that the gods had sent him an image of his honorable father. Awed by this apparent favoritism of the gods he placed the bit of metal in a secret shrine. His wife became jealous of his absences and determined to find out the cause.

When she first found the "mirror" and saw her own reflection, not recognizing it, she betrated her husband for worshiping another woman. An old priest was called in to settle the argument, and he, on beholding his reflection, took the "mirror" to the temple as being the portrait of a saint. It's a nice little legend, isn't it, but I wonder what would happen to the modern girl without a mirror?

Reflected in its clear crystal depths, she envisages herself as she dreams that others may see her. And what more natural than when she looks into her mirror she beholds the portrait of a lovely bride! But—this is a secret—it isn't her own eyes that play the trick on her! No, indeed! She simply sees herself as Dan Cupid ever sees her when planning his campaign of love. For he has already selected her to play this role, and he it is who sketchets the picture for her awed eyes. But she's not jealous of the reflection, as was the poor Japanese wife, for she knows that it's her own lovely self revealed to her as she will one day appear before the world.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Saturday, May 26

ACCORDING to the lunar and mutual configurations this day may prove one of intriguing and peculiar complexes. The mental activities may turn into singular or novel channels, with strange aims, quirps or fancies. But these may not be harmful if they be held to sound philosophical conclusions under the indicated proclivity to stability and soundness. Safeguard the employment.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of strange or unique vision or impulse, with this peculiar tendency, however, backed up by wise and substantial conclusions, practical and dependable. The employment may give concern.

A child born on this day may seem to have strange contradictions of character. With a fanciful and visionary mental view it also carries stability and profound insight. Diligent and responsible, it may yet find difficulties in employment.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Baby's Sudden Shriek May Mean Colic—Treatment

MANY a young mother has been frightened nearly to death when her baby, without the slightest warning, has let out a shriek loud enough to raise the dead. What is wrong?

This is a symptom of colic. Crying in children is usually due to colic. The child may seem perfectly well and go to sleep as usual. Suddenly he starts from his sleep and utters his cry. The legs are drawn up or moved about in efforts to get relief from the pain.

There are many causes for colic. Wrong feeding is the most common one. Undigested food in the intestinal tract may produce the trouble.

Generally there is constipation, with intestinal fermentation as a result. Gas formation follows. Colic is the natural consequence.

Too much candy, too much sugar—these are common causes. Overfeeding and irregular feeding are other important factors. Hasty drinking of the milk or boiling the other food may be followed by these unpleasant symptoms.

While we are speaking particularly of colic in children, the same causes will produce colic in grown people. But today we are thinking particularly of the youngsters.

The sudden cry of the child is not always due to colic. It may come from earache and the possibility of ear trouble must never be overlooked. Too often it is unsuspected.

Frequently attacks of colic demand correction of the feeding. The first thing to do is to select the right food, to prepare the milk properly, and to give the food at regular times.

The constipation should be overcome by right feeding and at the time of the acute attack the bowelse must be emptied at once. An enema of hot water and soap will speedily stop the cutting pains of colic. One or two pints of water will be effective.

Hot water compresses to the stomach or the use of the hot water bag will promote the comfort. Heat is of great value.

I am sorry to say that paregoric is given by mothers to relieve the colic of the baby. Under no circumstances should paregoric or any other opium product be given by a layman. It is rare for the modern doctor to resort to opiates, but, if they are ever justified, they must not be given without the personal direction of the family doctor.

Sometimes rhubarb and soda, or milk of magnesia, or a little baking soda in water, may be given. But it is better to employ the enema and hot applications and call the doctor if relief is not obtained quickly.

Modess

So Dependable for Summer Clothes

For charming, flimsy costumes of summer there is nothing to compare with the comfort and assurance of Modess, the new sanitary napkin perfected by Johnson & Johnson.

To form the disposable filler of Modess, a new material has been invented. It fluffs like cotton but disintegrates perfectly in water. The Johnson & Johnson gauze is specially softened and cushioned with a film of cotton. Sides are gently rounded so that no chafing is possible.

For greater safety, the back of Modess is moisture-repellent. The new napkin is highly absorbent in spite of its amazing softness. Here is perfection at last in a sanitary convenience.

You may purchase Modess without discussion by use of the Purchase Coupon below. Fifty cents for a box of twelve.

NEW FEDERAL'S BAR RAIDED

A barroom in the New Federal Hotel, 8 West General Robinson street, was raided late last night by Federal prohibition agents. William Liedeman, 41, alleged proprietor, and Nick Blom, 23, were reported arrested. Agents said they seized 200 pints of ale, 22 pints of beer, two quarts of whisky and a quart of wine.

Invading Hays borough, the prohibition agents raided the dwelling at 214 Watson street, arrested Fred Weidenhof, and the residence at 323 Watson street, where they took into custody Frank Calabrese. A still and whisky were found in each dwelling, the agents announced.

Will Gives Prize For Consistency To Coolidge

Will Rogers.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 25.—By golly, you got to give Calvin credit for consistency. He told 'em a year ago that he thought this farm bill was wrong. They took it back and took out the word "hog" and replaced it with "pork," but he still wouldn't fall for it. Politicians couldn't understand any man vetoing a bill with an election coming on.

I have always claimed that the farmer will get no relief by legislation, for there is more people eating than there is raising, so he is a minority before he starts.

His relief should come through taxes. When a farm don't pay anything, it shouldn't be taxed.

I am not worrying about Andy Payne winning the race, but I am worried if he will win anything else.

Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Pittsburgh's Younger Set Turns to Stage as Diversion From Dances, Parties and Benefits

TRINITY CLUB GIRLS -:- PRODUCE MUSICAL PLAY -:- TO FINANCE WORK

DOLLIE JOHNSTON
Dollie Johnston has a role in "Irene," musical comedy to be produced tonight and tomorrow night in Syria Mosque.

ADALINE POLIS
Also in the cast for the musical comedy which Trinity Branch, Girls Friendly Society, presents is Adaline Polis.

HELEN O'HERRON
Helen O'Herron is among the 98 "Gee I's" who will appear in the two-night production at the Mosque.

PHOTOS BY TRINITY COURT.

EDITH HALL
Edith Hall will be seen in the "show," by which the girls are financing their educational program.

SOME folks have the notion that society women, particularly those of the younger set, have nothing on their minds but social life—bridges, luncheons, dances, and novelty entertainments like treasure hunts. And when these care-free, pleasure-bent young folks go South in the winter, or North in the summer, or abroad, are seeking, they think, these same pastimes in a new setting.

But many of the younger set in Pittsburgh are interested in the arts, particularly in the art of acting. And they have an opportunity to express themselves in this art in the Stage and Play Society, the Junior League, and the Junior Section of the Sewickley Woman's Club, and in the annual production of the Sewickley Cot Club, too.

It's not very often that they, like their poorer and equally ambitious sisters, have a chance to become professional actors. In spite of the difficulties keeping one from the coveted profession of acting, one member of the Sewickley young set, the younger married set, in this case, has had her opportunity and will make her debut as a professional player.

After keeping you in suspense all this time, I'll now let you in on the secret—Mrs. William J. Griffith, Jr., the former Brown Mohard, will make her debut on the stage next Monday night. She will appear at the Pitt Theater with the stock company as Florence Ainslee in "Mary's Other Husband."

And what is more, I hear the house is just about sold out for the night of Mrs. Griffith's debut as a professional actress, her friends, both in Sewickley and Pittsburgh expecting to attend en masse to witness the start of her professional career.

And here's some more news—I understand she will appear with the players all summer.

Mrs. Griffith, whose name will appear on the program as Brown Mohard, has always been interested in acting. She has appeared, I remember, in the annual benefit plays produced by the Sewickley Cot Club, and unless I'm mistaken just a few weeks ago she appeared in a play given by the junior section of the Woman's Club of Sewickley Valley.

And the Junior League, whose membership, you know, is made up of the girls of the younger set of the "400," has many other interests besides social entertaining, too. There's a Junior League conference being held in Buffalo now. Augusta Leovy, president of the Pittsburgh League, and Mrs. Charles L. Snowden, Jr., and Mrs. Eleanor Walker are representing the Pittsburgh League at the conference.

The Junior League has decided, I understand, at this conference to establish a children's play bureau. And the Junior League of the country is interested in music, too—the members are compiling an American song book for children.

The dearth of juvenile drama and music, according to Mrs. Carlton Palmer, of Brooklyn, national president of the Junior League, has led to interest itself in filling this want.

Mrs. Palmer has also suggested that the Junior League co-operate with symphony orchestras.

Of course there are some delightful entertainments sandwiched in between conferences, and the hostesses are honoring their guest delegates.

Augusta Leovy is the guest of Frances Babcock, past president of the Buffalo League, and Mrs. Snowden and Mrs. Walker are the guests of Mrs. John McGraw.

Many of the members of the "400" who have been wintering abroad or spending the early spring on the continent, are thinking now of returning home. Wilhelmina Balken, daughter of Edward Duff Balken, and her aunt, Mrs. William Booth Trainer, who have been spending several months in Europe, will sail from Southampton some time this week, I have been told. They will arrive home very early in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weimer Steele, of Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna Grace Steele, to Blair V. McMillan, son of Mrs. Margaret V. McMillin, of Savannah avenue. Both are graduates of the University of Pittsburgh. Miss Steele is a member of the Phi Mu fraternity and Mr. McMillin of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. A summer wedding is planned.

The Chiron Club, pre-medical fraternity of the University of Pittsburgh, will hold its annual spring dance tonight in the South Hills Country Club. The chaperons will be Mr. and Mrs. John Schaub, Maurice B. Storer and Miss Mary Thompson.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Willison, of Wightman street, announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Edna Louise Orr, of Pittsburgh, daughter of the late R. M. Orr, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Thomas Wilmer Crawford, of this city, which was solemnized yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in the chapel of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church by the Rev. Reginald Moody. A breakfast in the Willison home followed. Mr. and Mrs. Crawford will be at home in North St. Clair street after an eastern trip. The bride attended Huntington Normal College, and Mr. Crawford is a graduate of West Virginia University. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi fraternity.

Miss Helen Best, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McComber Best, of Fifth avenue, has chosen June 21 as the date for her marriage to Dr. Erhart Ruedemann, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. O. Ruedemann, of Albany, N. Y. Dr. Ruedemann is now completing a course in surgery at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, N. Y.

The graduating class of the McKees Rocks High School gave the comedy "Charley's Aunt" last night and will repeat the comedy tonight. Miss Helen Eberle took the leading role last night, and the part will be assumed tonight by Miss Bella Kaminkowitz.

The W. B. A. Live Oak Review No. 111, will hold a card party Monday night in its new home in Federal street, North Side.

Miss Renelda Quirk will be chairman of a card party to be given by the Pittsburgh Girls' Club in Gimbel's on the afternoon of June 2. Those assisting are Miss Sara McKenzie, Miss Gertrude Kelly, Miss Nan Brooks, Miss Cecelia McArdle, Miss Stella Maloney, Miss Cecelia Blazek and Miss Mary Agnes Rettinger. The proceeds of the affair will be for the maintenance of the club's summer camp, "Sandy Lake," at Stoneboro.

* * *

Norwood Herrington chapter No. 256, O. E. S., will hold a dance and card party tonight in the Bellevue Masonic Temple. The committee in charge includes Mrs. Eleanor M. Pagel, Mrs. Albra Milliken, Mrs. Bess McClelland, Mrs. Mary K. Sherratt, Mrs. Olive Lewis, Mrs. Olive Shaffer, Mrs. Bess Garlick and Mrs. Anna K. Pagel.

Patricia Pitt

members of the Thursday Afternoon Club of Wilkinsburg. Annual reports were given at yesterday's meeting when the women gathered in the home of Mrs. J. H. McCulloch in Laketon Heights. Mrs. W. D. Sleppy assisted the hostess.

Richard Hughes' melodrama, "Danger," will be repeated tomorrow in the Moose Temple, Penn avenue, as part of a benefit performance given by Welsh groups of Pittsburgh. The Drama League Radio Players, under the direction of Mrs. Lane Thompson, will present the play in total darkness, with stage settings, depending entirely upon sound for their effects. The cast, which will include Mrs. Augusta J. Steele, Chester B. Story and Claude McNair, will be assisted by a quartet of Welsh singers under the direction of Evan Lloyd.

A thoroughly representative audience was in attendance last night at Carnegie Music Hall for the benefit concert given for the Y. W. C. A. summer conference fund by Christine Miller Clemson. It was a beautiful program, sung with all the artistry and grace and charm of which this outstanding Pittsburgh artist is possessed. Earl Mitchell played Mrs. Clemson's accompaniments and was graciously given recognition by the singer at the close of each group. The German group was perhaps the most impressively sung, but Mrs. Clemson did the Dvorak Biblical song with surpassing dignity and beauty and certainly few singers even can approximate her in spirit and sympathetic understanding of Negro spirituals, several of which she gave as her closing numbers. She did Gertrude Ross's little "Carmela" as a final encore.

A musicale tea will be given tomorrow by the Dormont Young Woman's College Club in Miss Mary Ryman's home, Belrose avenue, Dormont. Miss Henrietta Bricker has charge of the program, which will be given by Miss Olive Snyder, pianist; Miss Martha Painter, reader; Miss Agelina Cazale, soprano; Miss Mildred Jungiger and Miss Ruth Parker.

UNUSUAL PROGRAM ENDS EPOCH CLUB'S SEASON

It was a delightfully clever and novel program with which Epoch Club members closed their year yesterday at the home of Mrs. Jens G. L. Schreuder, in Hutchison avenue, Edgewood. Since "hobbies" constituted the program subject for the season, the same idea was carried out in resume at the final meeting. After a picnic luncheon on the lawn, there was a musical reading with tableaux accompanying, the living pictures depicting the hobbies of the various members. The reading, which was in verse, was the work of Mrs. E. J. Searles, whose hobby is poetry and who had arranged the program for yesterday. The piano accompaniment was played by Mrs. E. E. Baker, and the reading was given by Mrs. Harold W. Cope, whose hobby, "The Spoken Word," had been discussed in a paper earlier in the season, as had the others, too. Gardening, the drama, the public library, the Victorian period, bridge and all the other hobbies of the members were portrayed in costume by means of the tableaux. Annual reports were heard at the short business session which was a part of the afternoon's proceedings.

The Cordova Club has issued invitations for an exhibition of small paintings done by the members, the exhibition to be held in the Booklovers' Shop, South Highland avenue. It will open tomorrow and will continue to June 8. The exhibitors are Helen A. Bennett, Eleanor Simms Black, Alice Preston Clapp, Anna Belle Craig, Lidie E. Gray, Margaret Edmonds Jensen, Bertha Gill Johnston, Edna Lauschke, Margherita Chiara Langer, Cora Lee, Florence E. Newcomer, M. Louise Pershing, Rachel McClelland Sutton, Helen C. Whitmer, Sarah C. Wilson and Henrietta F. Williams.

A novel program has been arranged for the Wilkinsburg Woman's Club outing to be held tomorrow at the filtration plant of the Pennsylvania Water Company. Contrary to original plans, which provided for postponement in case of rain, the affair will be held regardless of the weather. The women are to be seated at luncheon in "native state" groups and each group will contribute something to the program.

Additional Club News

A tournament of grecian games will be held by the department of health education, Central Y. W. C. A., tomorrow afternoon on the campus of the Pennsylvania College for Women. In case of rain the event will be postponed until next Saturday. Following a processional of the high priest, vestal virgins, attendants, heralds and contestants, a sacrifice to the gods will be offered on the altar which will form the background of the setting. Games and races exemplifying the contests of old Greece, then will be held. They will include javelin and discus throw, armour race, torch race, wrestling, boxing, archery, foot races and chariot races. To the winners in all events, laurels will be awarded. The pageant will close with a Grecian dance and a recessional. Over 125 girls will participate in this affair. The unusual theme, the many and varied costumes and the beauty of the natural setting, will make the pageant one of the outstanding features of the Y. W. C. A. spring program.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

by FRANK L. PACKARD

Bob, Hidden in the Hold Of the Ship, Hears The Chinamen Talk

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley, once a dashing sea-faring adventurer, is picked up in a fragile craft by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Mute evidence on the body testifies to the fact that the man died in a struggle. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives the various articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after thirty years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

OBVIOUSLY then the five Chinamen had a nightly rendezvous somewhere in the alleyway where they could not be seen from either deck. Where was it, exactly; and why did they meet together at all? Their task, from their standpoint at least, in view of the fact that they had secured those two ivory idols at Patua, would certainly seem to have been accomplished; and, granting that Singapore was their destination, since the Monotah touched nowhere but at out-of-the-way places enroute, why should there be any further communication between them until Singapore was reached, especially as they had gone to such pains to spread the impression that they were, and desired to remain, strangers to one another? He had been a little more than curious about it. It was an ace in his hand.

And so, this evening, descending by a companionway amidships, unseen from the lower decks, and in the role merely of an interested first-class passenger, he had inspected the alleyway. There were several cabins occupied by the engineers, the galley, the entrance to the engine-room—nothing else except this small store-room. He had found it unlocked. Whether it had been left so inadvertently, or whether the lock had been cleverly picked, he did not know. The door was not locked. It was obvious that the five Chinamen would not foregather in the open alley-way; and since, by the process of elimination, there was no other place where they could have met except in this store-room, he had anticipated the probability of their coming again tonight by stealing in here and concealing himself long in advance of the hour at which on the former occasions they had joined each other.

One bell! Muffled, indistinctly, scarcely audible over the creaking and groaning of bulkheads and stanchions, the sound of the ship's bell reached him. Half-past twelve.

If they were coming at all, it should be within the next few minutes. The object of their meeting, which was apparently a regular occurrence each night, was, as he had already admitted to himself, beyond even conjecture on his part, for it seemed to be both illogical and risky—but since there was an object, it must therefore be all the more vital for that very reason. He hoped for a lot from it. He had lived among the natives all his life, and he had a smattering not only of Malay but Chinese—enough, he felt sure, to glean a general idea of anything that might be said. So, for instance, if he obtained an inkling of the plans of these men, or, better, still, discovered where in Singapore the rest of Hsi Yan's unholy crew were to be found, it might affect his future course of action very materially.

The Monotah circling her way back to Singapore now was touching constantly at every little beach that promised anything in the way of cargo, but it was certain that these men here on board would not maroon themselves by leaving the ship—the one way for them to reach Singapore was to stay on the Monotah. If, then, he learned where their confreres hived in Singapore, it would be infinitely to his advantages to reach Singapore first—it would relieve him of this masquerade on board here that he did not in any degree relish, and it would give him time to formulate definite plans, probably with the co-operation of the authorities, that would bring to book every last one of the slant-eyed scum who had been aboard Hsi Yan's junk on the night that Kalawa had been attacked.

He would like to be waiting in Singapore for the arrival of the Monotah! And it could be easily done—once he was assured that he could temporarily lose sight of the five that were here, and in the interim know exactly where to pick up the Singapore end of the affair. Quite easily done!—for, not knowing just what might transpire, he had told Nanu to keep on with the Alita along the coast ahead of the Monotah, and to touch at certain specified points every three or four days, but always far enough away from the town or village or beach where the Monotah called so that no attention would be attracted to the schooner. He might even then, if things broke right tonight and he deemed it advisable, leave the Monotah at daybreak—that is, if the Monotah could make a landing at all in this weather. She ought to be pretty well off Acru now, and the Alita would be lying up somewhere just a few miles beyond, waiting for the Monotah to pass before making for the next rendezvous that he and Nanu had agreed upon. Once on the Alita, in view of the Monotah's frequent stops along the coast, he could easily make Singapore at least several days ahead of the ship, and so—

Bob Kingsley became suddenly tense. There was no sound distinguishable above the ship's noises, but the blackness was momentarily less opaque. Of course! It was due to the dimly-lighted alleyway without. The door had opened. Something white and shadowy was in the room. And now it was black again and he could see nothing. The door had closed.

The minutes passed. Bob Kingsley's pulse had quickened. There was a sense of almost fierce exultation upon him. The night, in spite of the weather and the Monotah's wallowings, was not to prove wholly barren of results, for at least it was certain now that he was to be present at a secret conference of the men he was watching, however much or however little information might accrue from it.

Three times more the door had opened. And now there were four men in the room. There was only one more to come. There was no talking—not even a sibilant whisper. The four men appeared to be waiting in patient, phlegmatic silence until their number should be complete. A faint lessening of the darkness again! The door opened and closed for the fifth time.

And then, peering through the little tunnel-like fold in the tarpaulin, Bob Kingsley nodded his head in grim satisfaction. His vantage point could not have been better chosen. He could see perfectly. There was a light in the room now—a candle was burning. A blamed queer scene, though! What the devil were they up to? It was as though some secret rite were being performed. The candle was stuck on the floor, and around this in a circle were squatted the white-bloused figures of the five Chinamen. He could see the faces of only two—yellow, inscrutable faces—the more yellow because of the candle-light. Both were men of a little under middle age. Both possessed unlovely, vicious features, for all that their expression was one of calm, unruffled composure—snakes' eyes! The other three had their backs to him. One of these latter, the one on the right, seemed to have taken something from a hidden recess in his clothing and to have passed it to the man on his left. This man in turn passed it on. What was it? Still not a word had been spoken. Bob Kingsley strained a little forward. The object was being handed now to the fourth man, and he ought to be able to get a glimpse of it this time for the fourth man was one of the two who sat facing him. He drew in his breath quickly. Yes, he saw what it was now!

CHAPTER XIV.

ONE of the two ivory idols!

It went to the fifth man; and this man, instead of passing it on to the one who had originally produced it, tucked it away inside his own blouse. Was that what the gathering was all about? Was hat why they met each night—that every one of the five might have visible proof that the devilish little idol was safe, and also, in the presence of them all, that its custodianship should be changed on each occasion? Apparently! But above and beyond all that, what was it that invested a more or less ordinary bit of carved ivory with such priceless value that murder for its possession was no more than a mere matter of detail? And where was the other idol? Probably it would be passed around from hand to hand now in the same manner. No—they had begun to talk. At least, the taller of the two men who sat facing him was talking—and was talking fast and volubly, too!

Bob Kingsley, listening eagerly, frowned. His knowledge of the language was too meager by far to follow all that the man said. There was something about a torn garment—whatever that meant! A man with a torn garment who had been found. And then there was something about tonight—before daylight. And a knife. A knife was silent. Who was to know who had done it? It might even be that the body could be thrown into the sea when there were no watching eyes, for the night was very bad.

Murder!

Bob Kingsley's face hardened. He had understood that much anyhow! Some man aboard the Monotah, who had a "torn garment" was, for some reason or other, to be murdered before daylight. A nice lot, this. They sat there around the candle without exhibiting a vestige of emotion, and cold-bloodedly proposed to drive a knife into someone.

Their voices mingled now—in a chorus of assent, it seemed—no single word being distinguishable.

Then silence fell suddenly upon them, and the five figures, grotesque in the candle light, sat there swaying to and fro with the pitch and roll of the ship—like queer marionettes that were worked by strings, and whose bodies and heads all bobbed back and forth in an absurd fashion at the same time.

But they were intent upon something now. The one who had done most of the talking had produced what looked like a slender piece of rattan of the sort used in weaving native baskets. It was about 12 inches long, and it must have been dry and brittle for Bob Kingsley could just catch the faint crackle of it as the man broke it into pieces. Five pieces! Five pieces of different lengths! They lay on the deck now beside the candle for all to see.

And now the man, whether the actual leader of the band or not, but who so far had acted as master of ceremonies, shuffled the little pieces of sticks together; then suddenly his hand closed swiftly over them, and as swiftly went behind his back. The next instant he thrust out a closed fist from which protruded evenly the ends of the five little sticks.

Bob Kingsley's lips took on a grimmer twist. It was merely a gamble as to which one of the five should wield the knife—the murder itself was already accepted as having been accomplished. They were drawing lots. Each man in turn reached out and extracted a piece of stick from the extended fist.

Was it the longest or the shortest piece that carried with it the gruesome honor of election? He did not know. Nor could he see who had drawn the one or the other. They were evidently measuring the sticks by laying them out side by side on the floor, but their bodies were all bent forward and their heads were all together, and nothing of what was going on could be seen. Nor did any one of the five, either by word or gesture, indicate who had been chosen.

The light went out. The door began to open and close—at intervals. The five Chinamen were gone.

Bob Kingsley made his way out of the sweltering heat of the ship's store-room. In the alleyway, with the lurch of the ship as he started toward the companionway to the main deck, he lurched like a drunken man. The old scrowger seemed to be making worse weather of it than before. Much worse. Or was it himself? It had been suffocating in there—his head was throbbing with it. That was a small matter however—a breath of fresh air up there on deck would set him straight again fast enough, and anyway his head was throbbing vastly more on quite another count.

Tomato Pie

Line a deep pie plate with good short crust. Scald, drain, peel and slice five large tomatoes in half-inch slices. Put a layer on the bottom, dust with a tablespoonful of seasoned crumbs, and the same of grated onion, pepper, salt and a little sugar, then a layer of sliced cucumbers. Dot with butter then repeat the layers until all the tomatoes are used then turn in a cupful of cream sauce and put on the top crust. Bake until the crust is done, 30 to 40 minutes. This makes an excellent luncheon dish.

Madge, Worried About the Tutoring of Miss Lincoln, Is Advised by Lillian

I DID not know whether I was more annoyed or amused at Lillian's account of Katie's behavior during her interview with Mr. Veritzen upon the subject of the beach picnic which he had promised to give for Lillian, unaware that his old friend deliberately had managed things so that he had given the invitation. I knew my employer's fastidious taste and critical judgment and wondered if he would think I had been most remiss in disciplining my little maid during her years of service to me.

But amusement sanely triumphed, and I laughed with real enjoyment at Lillian's vivid description to which she added a heartfelt word of praise for me.

"You sure were there with the intelligent co-operation, old dear," she said. "Didn't he dive beautifully into the fish creel though? He hardly waited for the bait. I thought I'd pass out when you rolled your eyes at him and asked him if he'd ever attended a beach picnic. You're wasted in his historical research department, little one. You ought to ask him for the ingenue role in his next production."

"Don't talk nonsense," I said crossly. "I'm glad you will have your chance to study the people in your puzzle while they are spending the day at the beach, but I have a very special puzzle I'd like you to help me solve."

"Go ahead! Shoot!" she returned airily. "You've come to the right place, dearie. If I can only cut down my time 35 minutes I can beat the champion solver of crossword puzzles. I used to be a full hour behind her, but I'm gaining distinctly."

She shot a swift glance at me and as quickly changed her tone.

"I'll quit," she said. "Go on, tell me what's bothering you."

"It's Miss Lincoln," I confessed. "What on earth shall I do with her when she comes for that first tutoring tomorrow?"

Lillian leaned forward in her chair and looked at me steadily.

"Are you stalling?" she said, "or hasn't Philip's real reason for sending her to you yet penetrated your dome?"

"I know what you told him," I said slowly, "and while he was talking the same thought had come to me. But thinking it over, it doesn't seem possible that—"

"Stop thinking it over then," she interrupted brusquely, "for it's not only possible but certain. Remember I know Phil Veritzen as well as if I'd fashioned him from the primeval clay. He doesn't care one continental-objurgation—what you teach the Lincoln damsel about the history of the drama so long as you manage to impress her with the general undesirability of it as a profession. How you're going to manage it I don't know, for you can swerve a homing bird from its nest, a magnet from its pole and all the other similies in the book more easily than you can cure a stage-struck girl of her ambition to act."

"I know it," I said miserably. "I haven't the slightest idea how to begin."

"Don't—for awhile," Lillian advised sensibly. "Go at the thing at first exactly as if Phil's plan to have her taught the history of the drama were a bona fide one. Remember you haven't taken any contract to keep the girl off the stage. That will be Phil's job. Just do your best when you get the chance. That's all he can expect. And of course he'll never admit in so many words the real reason for this stunt of teaching her. Do I hear a motor? Don't tell me that young Jackson is coming to see Mary again today! He's staging as continuous a performance as Noel used to do."

BARTELL RESTORES BUCS' DASH

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

BEST IN PITTSBURGH — FRIDAY, MAY 25, 192[illegible] — THIRTY-ONE

by JAMES J. LONG

Pirate Rooters See Infield Reserves in Action and Praise Bartell in Particular—Rookie Not Only Shines in Field But Gives Team Pepper It Needs—Vance Just a Pitcher to Young Ott.

PITTSBURGH fans yesterday were given their first chance to see the Pirate infield reserves in action, and the exhibition was eminently satisfactory.

The most important feature of all, of course, was the fact that the Pirates won the ball game, with two of the new men in the lineup and helping to give Burleigh Grimes the kind of support his splendid pitching deserved.

Dick Bartell.

But apart from that, the work of the new infielders themselves was highly pleasing to the spectators. Mulligan had nothing to do at third base, but he has already demonstrated his fielding ability in a manner that leaves no room for doubt as to his value as a utility man in the big show.

INTEREST naturally centered in Bartell, who had been seen chiefly in pinch-running roles, and Dick gave the spectators a thrilling afternoon by accepting the unusual number of nine chances, seven of which were assists.

FOUR of Bartell's fielding feats bordered on the sensational, and the fans left the park singing his praises. They were all the more pleased with his work because the trying of him in the lineup by Manager Bush was an experiment that many of the club's followers had been eagerly awaiting for some time. Like Mulligan, Bartell also made one of the Pirates' hits.

BUT his brilliant fielding is by no means the extent of Bartell's worth to the club. If he is more valuable for one point than for another, it for his ability to spill a heap of pepper on the field and put life into the game that is sadly lacking when he is not playing. Dick is constantly chattering and making it evident that the Bucs are a real live ball team and not a buch of automatons. Noise and pepper were what the Pirates needed as badly as anything else, and it is refreshing to see those qualities in evidence at last, even if the source of it is only a 20-year-old substitute. Dick's day has not yet arrived, but it's coming.

WHEN a young and slightly built player breaks into the big leagues and happens to get away successfully with a string of base-hits, some of the older pastimers in discussing him will wink knowingly, and say: "He's going along all right now while the picking is soft and he is facing only the easy pitchers, but wait until he goes up against Dazzy Vance and some of those birds—they'll knock the bat out of his hands."

That's what they said about a number of new players this spring, but one of the youngsters who has just broken in as a regular is fooling them. That youngster is Melvin Ott, the 19-year-old outfielder, who appears to have finally settled down into a regular job in the Giant outfield since George Harper was traded to St. Louis.

Melvin Ott.

ACCORDING to Will Wedge's dope, the great Vance seems to have no terrors for the child wonder. When the Dazzler pitched against the Giants May 1 at the Polo Grounds, and was beaten by Fitzsimmons, Ott tagged the big blond for a single and a double and drove in two of the Giants' four runs.

Tuesday Ott did as much as anyone to unsettle Vance and give the strikeout king his second straight Giant setback. Ott is one of the few Giants Vance hasn't whiffed. "Daz" had fanned four Giants when Ott came up in the third inning Tuesday to sting Vance for his second hit, a double to right, which, with the help of Lindstrom's single, gave the Giants their first run.

It was a five-run rally in the sixth that gave the Giants the bulge Tuesday and it was Partridge's error on Ott's hard grounder that let in the runs that sent the Giants into the lead.

AT his best, Paul Berlenbach was only a puncher, and never looked in the ring like a workman of real class, even though he did win decisions over Jack Delaney, Mike McTigue and Young Stribling, but whatever little fistic ability he might have had appeared to have left him when he met Larry Estridge in New York Tuesday night.

Paul Berlenbach.

The club physician halted the affair in the seventh round because Estridge was bleeding profusely from a cut inside his mouth, but reports state that up to that stage the bout was a farce and that there were repeated cries of "Throw them out."

If Berlenbach needed a final argument to convince him that his fighting days are done it was provided in the hoots and boos of the fans, and it is believed he will quit the game for good. It is said that even Paul's punch is now gone. They go back fast. Less than two years ago Berlenbach received $125,000 for boxing Jack Delaney. Tuesday night he was given only $1,250 for meeting Estridge.

WHATEVER ground they have lost to the Cardinals and Reds this spring, the Pirates seemed determined to make up at the expense of the Cubs. Donie Bush's men have now beaten the Bruins five straight times and have trimmed them in six games out of nine played to date. McCarthy's men have yet to win a game in Pittsburgh this year, having dropped all four played.

The Cubs are also suffering the reaction that often strikes

FIGHT RESULTS

At New York—Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, defeated Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, 15 rounds; Santiago Zorril defeated Dominick Petrone, 10 rounds; Harry Ebbets knocked out Laddie Lee, 1 round; Ernie Jarvis defeated Frisco Grande, 6 rounds.

At Chicago—Joe Medill and Mike Dundee drew, 10 rounds; Young Nationalista knocked out Benny Schwartz, 1 round; Earl Dublinsky defeated Earl Mastro, 6 rounds; Herbie Wilson defeated Lou Terry, 6 rounds.

At Detroit—Stanislaus Loayza defeated Bruce Flowers, 10 rounds; Arturo Shekels defeated Jimmy Hutchinson, 6 rounds.

At Fort Thomas, Ky.—Pat Daly defeated Johnny Michaels, 10 rounds; Kid Lencho knocked out Young Irish, 5 rounds; Tony Phillips defeated Lon Lovelace, 6 rounds; Johnny Brown defeated Young Emmerich, 4 rounds.

At Des Moines, Ia.—Mike Mandell won by a technical knockout over Jack (Chief) Elkhart, 5 rounds.

At St. Louis—Chuck Wiggins defeated Jack Renault, 10 rounds; Paul Steadman defeated Tom O'Loughlin, 10 rounds; Dave Knost knocked out Jim St. Clair, 10 rounds.

STANFORD, ILLINOIS FAVORED TO WIN

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 25.—(AP.)—The cream of the nation's college track athletes, about 500 strong, are assembled hereabouts to compete in the fifty-second annual I. C. A. A. A. A. championship meet at Harvard stadium today and tomorrow. Among the athletes, who represent 32 colleges and almost every district in the United States, were eight of the 1927 champions who returned to defend their titles in nine events. Trial heats in 13 of the 15 events will be held today and the finals will be staged tomorrow.

Though the meet probably will be dominated by the remarkable teams from Stanford and Southern California, indications were that several eastern athletes would be among the meet's high school.

STANFORD FAVORITE

The Stanford team appears unbeatable and Southern California has the best claim for second place. "Dink" Templeton, Stanford coach, has predicted that his team will score 35 points, but it is expected to do much better. Dean Cromwell of Southern California claimed 20 points for his trojan athletes, among whom are Charlie Borah, intercollegiate sprint champion, and Lee Barnes, one of the best pole vaulters in the world.

Penn State, Harvard and Yale have a bare chance of beating the Trojans out for second place, but the experts have given these teams, the best in the East, only little encouragement.

BIG TEN STARS READY

CHICAGO, May 25.—(AP.)—Three hundred athletes, including a score or more of Olympic prospects will go to their marks today in the preliminary events of the Western Conference outdoor track and field championships at Dyche Stadium, Northwestern University. The finals will be run tomorrow afternoon.

NATIONAL COLLEGIATE SPRINT CHAMPION AND PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY RELATED

Charley Borah of the University of Southern California is the national intercollegiate 100 and 220-yard sprint champion and is in Cambridge, Mass., to defend his laurels in the I. C. 4-A. track and field meet in the Harvard stadium today and tomorrow which will serve as an Olympic tryout test. Charley has run the 100-yard dash in 9 3-5 seconds twice already this year and is Charley Paddock's keenest rival, despite the marvelous return to form the latter recently has flashed. Charley is a nephew of Senator Borah, who is prominently mentioned as a possible Republican nominee in the presidential race.

Yanks May Be Denied Olympics "Movies"

PARIS, May 25.—(INS.)—American "movie" fans may not have an opportunity to see news pictures of American athletes in action in the Olympic games at Amsterdam this year. A dispute has developed between the American news film companies and the Dutch Olympic Committee over the demand of the committee that the American concerns pay a fee of $60,000 for "exclusive American rights" to make pictures of the Yankee athletes.

International Newsreel, M. G. M. News and other American news picture companies jointly protested to the Dutch Olympic Committee, claiming that they should have the same treatment as the press. The American concerns said they would not pay the fee, calling it an imposition.

A representative of the American enterprises carried a letter of protest to Amsterdam, saying that the American news reel companies would not make any pictures rather than pay the sum demanded.

Representatives of the American firms vigorously state that they are not boycotting the Olympic games. On the other hand, they claim they are registering what they regard as a fully justified protest against the payment of $60,000 for rights they claim they are entitled to free of any charge.

The letter to the chairman of the Dutch Olympic Committee said in part:

"Please accept this communication as a formal notification that —— newsreel declines to negotiate with regard to the so-called rights to film the 1928 Olympic Games for newsreel distribution in America on any basis than free, unrestricted admission of one cameraman."

Pittsburghers On Republican Ball Team

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Pittsburgh and the state of Pennsylvania will be well represented at Griffith Stadium here tomorrow afternoon when Republican and Democratic members of the Lower House meet to decide the annual congressional baseball championship. Representative Clyde Kelly of Pittsburgh is the active manager and second baseman for the Republican nine. He has chosen Representative J. Mitchell Chase of Clearfield to occupy the receiving end of the offensive, while the third Pennsylvanian on the lineup will be Representative John M. Morin of Pittsburgh. All proceeds of the game will go to the Congressional Club of Washington, composed of wives and daughters of members of Congress. Usually the gate receipts run around $5,000.

Representative Kelly was chosen manager of the Republican outfit because of his long service in annual games of the kind. He has been a regular fixture on the G. O. P. nine since 1913, when he first played "political" ball.

SHARKEY TO BOX FOR FUGAZY

NEW YORK, May 25.—(INS.)—Promoter Humbert Fugazy has matched Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, to meet the winner of the bout between Johnny Risko and George Godfrey, to be held in Brooklyn on June 20. Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, said Sharkey would be available for such a bout late in July.

Fugazy apparently has stolen another march on his rival, Tex Rickard. Tex has been negotiating for a bout between Sharkey and Vittorio Campolo, Argentine champion.

R. Waner Pulls Triple Play for Dormont

Shortstop Ralph Waner of the Dormont club of the County League, a brother of Paul and Lloyd Waner of the Pirates, collaborated last evening with First Baseman Wickline to pull a triple play against Beltzhoover in the 1-1 eight-inning tie played by the teams. Goldberg and Harrison were on base after having singled with none down when Waner nailed Hadley's line drive over second, stepped on the sack, retiring Goldberg and then threw to first, catching Harrison off the bag.

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 25.—Stanley Marshall, of Warren, O., a pole vaulter, has been elected to captain the W. & J. track and field team in 1929.

Borah Pounds Teeth And Cinders Alike

By JESS CARVER.

ON the wall of Harvard's stadium at Cambridge, where the annual I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships are being held today and tomorrow, will be pinned a sign—reading something like this:

'Have you a toothache? If so, see C. Borah, care Southern California's dressing room, for service."

There may be other aspiring dentists taking part in the intercollegiates at Harvard this week-end, but certainly there is none more famous than C. Borah of Southern California. Defending champion in both the century and furlong events, Flying Charley will make a heroic effort to set new records in both races, a feat he came close to accomplishing last year at Philadelphia.

Borah left his dental clinic work at Southern California's College of Dentistry to come East for a second time to demonstrate his ability to pick 'em up and lay 'em down a bit faster than any other collegian in competition today. He is as fine a student as he is a runner—and during the first two years of his college career, he has kept his grades above the 94 per cent figure. His clinic work, in which he sometimes is forced to stand for six and seven hours at a stretch on a hard concrete floor, has been given by some of his followers as the reason for his failure to round into form earlier this year.

SET NEW RECORD

Borah came east last year after having burnt up most all of his

"Forget Cigarettes Until of Age"—Babe's Advice

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—(AP.)—Boys should not smoke until they reach the age of 21, George Herman (Babe) Ruth, declared in an address at "Champion's Night" exercises of Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus.

"I can truthfully say," said the home run king, "that I never smoked a cigaret until I was 20, and it is my candid opinion that no boy should smoke until he is 21. I think smoking deadens the youthful mind and I hate to see a boy of 10 or 11 walking along the street puffing a cigaret."

In reply to a question as to what he thought of the Philadelphia Athletics, Ruth said it looked like they would be a "high second" again this year, adding: "The A's have a good team, but they'll have to be content with second honors, for the Yankees are out to grab the pennant."

FROM out of the West comes a 20-year-old boy to put a kick into the slumping Pirates. Daredevil Dick Bartell has stolen the Forbes Field show from the Waner boys and other Pirate luminaries.

For many weeks Dick Bartell has been letting off steam in the infield practice sessions, but the energy of the youngster had to have something more serious than a practice session for display. The chance came yesterday and the boy today is the talk of Pirate fandom and 25 Cubs, who saw they oungster help send them to a 6-to-2 defeat.

The cords were cut from Richard The Lionhearted and he bounced into action soon after it became known that Capt. Pie Traynor had taken to a sick bed with influenza. The Papricka Kid went to second base, Eddie Mulligan moving over to third.

BARTELL SHINES

Many there were in the stands who feared for the worst when they saw the Oaklanders going into the scrap with the Bears with Capt. Pie and Sparky Adams on the sick list. Mulligan did not have any opportunity to make any plays, although Eddie's natural spirit of hustle would help any ball team.

It fell to the lot of Daredevil Dick to chalenge a lot of hard chances in his nine fielding attempts, but the youngster was equal to the task. Throughout the afternoon he was a reminder of Hughey Critz at his best. It was a game worth writing home about, so Dick should send all the details to the folks in Alameda, Cal.

Bartell did more than make a flock of fine plays; the youngster gave the first defense a dash of the pepper it long has needed. There is no disputing the remarkable skill of the Pirate infielders, but it is not doing any of them an injustice to say that Bartell makes more racket on a ball field than all of them.

Sharing the honors of the afternoon with Dick was Burleigh Grimes, veteran master of the spit-

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

ONCE in a while in the world of sports there comes along a Chesty Joie Ray, a demon athlete who believes in himself and wants the world to know that he is good,

HOWARD HARPSTER

More often the good athlete is satisfied to let the world find out just how good he is. Frequently the really good man shrinks from publicity and it is like extracting teeth from a pullet to get the facts of his greatness from him.

TO the last of these three groups belongs a young man who appears destined to become a nationally famous figure in the football world next fall. He has been in the limelight the last two seasons and should be "ripe" for a crack at all-America honors this year, provided, of course, the team behind him measures up to his own greatness.

I have reference to Howard Harpster, the tall, lithe, hard-running good kicking, fine forward passing quarterback and brilliant field general, not to mention captain-elect, of the Carnegie Tech eleven.

I RAN into Howard the other day and made him blush by telling him I thought he should fill the shoes of Gibby Welch as the outstanding local gridiron performer and public idol next fall and expressing confidence in his ability to win all-America recognition if he gets any sort of a "break" and the Tech team, green last season, matures as it should.

We got to talking over prospects and I learned a great deal about the quiet, unassuming young athlete from Akron that I had not even suspected before.

FOR one thing, he is a star golfer, one who, if he would give the time to the game, might well become another Bobby Jones or Walter Hagen.

Take the average golfer off his guard or give him a lead and he will boast about his prowess on the links. Not so young Harpster. Isn't built that way. He was almost apologetic in providing the details after I had found the opening.

I learned that he had equaled par 72 on his home course, Fairlawn Heights, in Akron, and had beaten a former city champion there and had gone around the Portage course in 74, two over par, in the Ohio State amateur championship tournament when he was 19 years old. That's shooting good golf for a youngster or anybody else.

While in high school in Akron, Howard also won the scholastic tennis championship of the city in his sophomore year. There are

FRESHIES, KISKI, CLASH TODAY

By JESS CARVER.

THE 800-odd scholastic track and field stars, from all about this district, primed for the annual Pitt interscholastics in the Stadium tomorrow, have some fine marks to shoot for, aside from the local high school records.

Athletes from Washington, Rochester, Salem, Lock Haven, Peabody, Beaver Falls, South Brownsville and Greensburg and New Castle have turned in some great performances in the various important school meets staged in this vicinity so far this year. The Tech Interscholastics, the W. P. I. A. L. meet, and the county carnivals at Beaver and Washington contributed sterling times and remarkable distances.

This afternoon the Pitt freshman squad will close its season, meeting the Kiski stars in the Stadium. This meet was originally scheduled to be run off in conjunction with the Interscholastics tomorrow, but was moved up a day so as not to conflict with the high school stars.

NOTES of the BOXERS

JOE BELMONT, of Braddock, and Joe Louder of Arlington, have been matched for an eight-round bout at Washington, Pa., next Monday night.

George Courtney boxes Jack McVey in the main bout of the opening show of the season at the Coney Island stadium this evening. Phil McGraw meets Bobby Burns in a 10-round bout on the same card.

Boxer will meet puncher tonight in Chicago when Jack McCarthy, of Chicago's West Side, and Clyde Hull, South Dakota welterweight.

TOD MORGAN WINS BY SHADE MARGIN

NEW YORK, May 25.—(INS.)—Tod Morgan, of Seattle, will think twice before risking his junior-lightweight crown against Eddie (Cannonball) Martin again. Morgan outpointed the former bantam champion in their 15-round bout here last night, but he had to take four of the last six rounds to get the verdict.

Morgan won seven rounds and Martin six. Two were even. Martin piled up a big lead in the early going, but in the last six rounds the champion made him miss badly and landed a rain of blows on the challenger's chin.

ball, who held the Cubs in check. Opposed to Burleigh for five rounds was Artie Nehf, who pitched better ball than the score would indicate. Two of the four runs charged against Artie in the fourth were the result of a passed ball. Guy Bush and Ed Holly, Louisville graduate, finished for the Bears.

BUCS SCORE FIRST

There was no scoring by either team until the fourth round when 10 of the Pirates went to the barrier against Nehf. The four tallies of this round were followed by two more in the fifth. Beck's wide throw contributing to these runs. Bartell made his first major league hit in this inning. Grantham and Grimes also slamming the ball safe.

Beck scored the enemy's first tally in the sixth which he opened with a double. Maguire followed with a single and Beck scored later as Bartell chucked out Wilson on a one-handed play. Gonzales tripled at the start of the seventh and after Butler had walked, Mike counted on an infield out.

TRAINER ON GROUND

GREENFIELD, Mass., May 25.—Charles Mabrey, the New York reinsman, has arrived here to put the finishing touches on his pupils for the opening meeting of the Bay State Circuit, June 7-9.

DR. PENMAN, FORMER PANTHER, IS DEAD

ERIE, Pa., May 25.—(INS.)—Dr. Robert N. Penman, one time halfback of the University of Pittsburgh football team, died here today in St. Vincent's Hospital from poisoning, the result of an infection.

Dr. Penman, who praticed dentistry here for 10 years, successfully coached football in Central High School for several years. He was forced to give up athletics to care for his practice.

DRIVER HURT

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—(U.P.)—Kelly Patillo, protege of Peter De Paolo, was injured yesterday when his racing car crashed into a wall at the Indianapolis Speedway

ZIVIC TO FIGHT IN 'FRISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—(INS.)—Jack Zivic, rugged Pittsburgh welterweight, has consented to clash with Young Corbett, California fighter, in a 10-round bout here, June 11, Promoter Ancil Hoffman announced today.

BELTZHOOVER WINS

The Beltzhoover school athletes won the championship of the South Side grade school district in a track and field meet at Olympia park yesterday. The summary:

Boys' events—Beltzhoover 70, Allen 28 1-10, Beechwood 23 7-10, Snodgrass 11, Brashear 10½, Brookline 9, Westlake 7½, Spring Lane 4, Prospect 2 2-5, Cargo 2, Stevens 2, Wickersham 2, Harwood 1, Knox 1, Whittier 1.

Girls' events—Beltzhoover 23, Spring Lane 15, Snodgrass 11, Allen 8, Brookline 8, Union Township 5, Wickersham 5, Beechwood 4, Brashear 2, Harwood 2, Lee 2, Bane 1, Westlake 1, West Liberty 1.

SCHOOL HURLERS STAR

Two notable pitching achievements marked scholastic games played yesterday. Pitcher Richeny, of Rankin, fanned 19 batters and allowed no hits in achieving a seven-inning victory over Wilkinsburg High at Kennywood Park, 10-0, while Patsy Ragazzo, of Langley High, blanked Har-Brac, 2-0, fanning 17 and permitting only three hits.

SOX STAR HURT

CHICAGO, May 25.—(AP.)—Johnny Mostil, star White Sox outfielder, was hit between the eyes by a baseball in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with Detroit and knocked unconscious. He was forced to retire from the game.

SANDLOT BASEBALL

by TOM BIRKS

THE bitter cold of last evening did not stop some wonderful baseball being flashed, especially in the County League. Homewood-Brushton avenged that Tuesday defeat by swamping Bellevue at the North Boro grounds by a 13 to 3 score. Kinsey started for Bellevue and then Stewart went in. The game at Beltzhoover finished in a 1-1 tie. The brilliant pitching of Carroll and Jones featured the game.

IT must have been sweet music to the ears of the Homewood-Brushton contingent when the bats started rattling against Stewart's spitter. Stewart was a landmark out Homewood way for many years, so it is only natural that the East Enders like to cut his pitching average.

KINSEY, a new man, started the game for Bellevue. He complained of the bitter cold and seemed to have nothing on the ball so George Lees took him out and put Carl in. That is when Heinie Boll and his comrades started to fatten up their batting averages.

TWICE this week Dormont and Beltzhoover pitchers have staged battles worth while watching. Leo Carroll was hit hard last evening but as usual managed to stop any scoring. Leo has a wonderful knack of tightening up with runners on base and stopping a score.

Jones is entitled to lots of credit. It was in the final fram that Dormont managed to push over the run that tied up the score. It is a relief in the County League to see a pitchers' battle.

THE Jimmy Smith club will travel to Universal tomorrow. Sunday will find the Oaklanders meeting the W. O. W. outfit down at McKees Rocks. W. O. W. has not tasted defeat as yet this season in a Sunday game, so a good battle should ensue. The Smith's want two games for Decoration Day away from home. Call Hazel 1130.

AFTER that sensational defeat of the Thomas club the W. L. Heinekers are going great guns. Manager Collette says the club has struck its proper stride and wants a game for Sunday abroad with a good club, return game guaranteed. The Heinekers also want a couple of games away on Decoration Day. Call Jack Collette in the evening at Linden 1629-R.

THE Greenfield All-Stars will be the attraction at Jordan Field on Sunday. Last week-end the Greenfielders defeated the Carrick aggregation and the fans clamored for the management to bring them back. So they are back and the Jordans have a chance to avenge that defeat.

Suffered 8 Years With Eczema

After Other Remedies Failed, Ends Skin Trouble Quickly This Simple Way.

"You may be interested to know that for about 8 years I was suffering with a skin trouble I called Eczema. It affected me in two different parts of my body. A short time ago I noticed your ad in a newspaper for Peterson's Ointment. I purchased a box. I must add that I have tried almost every known remedy and failed. I will proudly admit that your remedy has proven the best and has not been half used up yet."—Ray O. Nesbet, Augusta, Me.

C. C. Scores "Strikers"

SUFFERN, N. Y., May 25.—(AP.)—A threatened "revolt" at an end, C. C. Pyle's cross-country pavement pounders set out today for Passaic, N. J., next to last control of their transcontinental chase for $48,500 in prize money. The runners expected to reach Passaic at about 1:30 p. m. eastern daylight time.

Published reports that many of the 55 derbyists were so dissatisfied with conditions that they were ready to "strike" brought denials from some of those accused of being ring leaders in the movement.

Among these was William Kerr, of Minneapolis, who holds sixth place in the elapsed standings. Kerr had been quoted as saying he would seek a writ of mandamus to prevent Pyle from forcing the entrants to jog the final 20 miles of the long trek at Madison Square Garden on Saturday night.

"I have been blamed for more than I am responsible for," said Kerr. "I have been misquoted. I have never appeared at the nightly control meetings because my contract did not call for that. I do not wish to make an exhibition of myself in the garden, but I would be foolish to destroy my chances at sixth money by not completing the race."

PYLE WRATHY

By LELAND C. LEWIS,
International News Service.

SUFFERN, N. Y., May 25.—C. C. Pyle in a telephonic conversation from New York City with the writer today spiked reports that "he was broke or that any contemplated move to obstruct the climax of his cross-country race would get considered."

"Lots of punches have been aimed at me," Pyle said. "Most of 'em have been below the belt, but I have shaken them off and am still far from punch drunk, as they say in the ring.

"The money to pay the 16 boys who will win the $48,500 has been posted and will be paid them on June 1, just before the start of the 24-hour team race at Madison Square Garden. If there are any of the crowd that want to turn Bolshevik now they can do so. Let them quit when they want to."

own Western tracks to show the East how the 100 and 220-yard should be run. He stepped the 100 in 9 4-5 seconds and then, returning to the track after about an hour, he set a new record in the furlong with a mark of 20 9-10 seconds.

In 1927, his first year as a varsity performer, besides winning both I. C. 4-A. sprint titles, he won the senior national A. A. U. 220-yard championship at Lincoln, and then placed so close to Chet Bowman in the 100 that he was given the race at first, though the decision was later reversed when the moving pictures of the race showed Bowman to have been a scant nose ahead of Charley.

PRESSED PADDOCK

His most famous feat occurred during his first year at Southern California, when he pressed the great Charley Paddock so hard that Charley had to set a new record to win a 100-yard race. Paddock ran the distance in 9 5-10 seconds, and the finish was so close that many folks who witnessed the race still swear that Borah broke the tape first.

In following the career of a dentist, Borah is emulating his father, who is a prominent dentist of Phoenix, Ariz. If he is as fast in pulling a refractory molar as he is on the track, his patients won't get a chance to say:

"Oh, doctor, will it hurt?"

BUYS TROT STAR

GOSHEN, N. Y., May 21.—W. H. Bradford, Bennington, Vt., who owns the Hambletonion favorite, Fireglow, 2:04, has purchased the 2-year-old trotting colt, Sir Guy Mac, from the Good Time Stable. The youngster is a son of McGregor the Great-Azurea.

Interest In Fray Grows

By TOM BIRKS.

WITH the announcement of the lineup of the St. Louis Muny League soccer team that opposes Heidelberg at the Bridgeville speedway tomorrow, fans in the district are beginning to warm up to the game that looms up as the greatest soccer attraction in Pittsburgh since the inception of the game.

This is one game that should appeal to the American element that follows soccer football. Both the St. Louis team, Western Olympic champion for 1928 are composed entirely of American-born boys. This speaks well for American development in the kicking code, and it can be said right here that sport lovers making the trip to the Speedway tomorrow will see two of the fastest soccer outfit ever gathered together.

Heidelberg is eagerly awaiting the fray. St. Louis is the team that put a crimp into Heidelberg's chances of representing America in the Olympics. And that is a sore spot that the Green and Gold Tornado has to wipe out. The game is scheduled to start at 4:30 Daylight savings time and will go the full 90 minutes.

SPORT COMMENT

a team after a long winning streak. Since they won 13 consecutive games they have lost four in a row.

BURLEIGH GRIMES continues to demonstrate that the Bucs got one of the most valuable pitchers in the big show when they hypnotized John McGraw into trading him for Vic Aldridge. Yesterday Grimes made his tenth start of the season, and in eight of his ten games he has gone the full distance. Moreover, he kept up his record of having made one or more hits in every game that he started.

ONE event in which America is being confidently counted upon to clean up in the track and field portion of the Olympic games is the running high jump.

According to such an authority as Ted Meredith, former quarter-mile running champion, who has been studying the timber available for the Amsterdam carnival, there are at least eight high jumpers in Uncle Sam's domain who are capable of outjumping the best in Europe.

Ted Meredith.

MEREDITH names Osborne, the record-holder; Brown, formerly of Dartmouth; McGinnis of Wisconsin, Burg of Chicago, King of Stanford, Maynard of Dartmouth, Brunk of Drake, and Haggard of Texas.

EACH of these men has jumped 6 feet 4 inches or better, whereas the best European jump ever made was 6 feet 3 inches, credited to Wahlstedt of Finland, Lewden of France, and Kopke of Germany.

FOUR MORE DRIVERS ENTER BRIDGEVILLE RACE

Four more prominent automobile drivers have sent in their signed entry blanks for the Decoration Day races, scheduled next Wednesday afternoon at the Bridgeville Speedway, one of the best half-mile board tracks in the country.

Henry Cosloy, director and manager of the Bridgeville Speedway, this morning announced that Bill Chittum, Columbus, O.; Sammy Grabiak, Greensburg; P. G. Waner, Braddock, and Floyd Travis, Lowellville, O.

A. M. A. PLANS BOAT TRIP TO AID FUND

The Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U. will hold a moonlight boat ride on the steamer Homer Smith, for the benefit of the American Olympic fund, June 6.

The proceeds of the affair will be turned over to the National Olympic fund committee as part of Pittsburgh's quota. Dancing and music will be part of the entertainment offered to the large crowd the local A. A. U. expects to attend.

The boat will leave the Monongahela wharf at the foot of Wood street, at 8:30 p. m., and return at 11 p. m.

National Open Draws Record Entry List

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—A record entry list of 1,065 for the National Open Golf championship was announced today by H. H. Ramsey, chairman of the championship committee of the United States Golf Association.

Qualifying rounds will be played in 17 districts June 11. The entries for 1928 exceed by 160 the number who sought to qualify last year.

SWEDES BEATEN

STOCKHOLM, May 25.—(AP.)—Czecho-Slovakia won the tie match in the Davis Cup tennis play against Sweden, five games to nothing, and thus qualified to meet New Zealand in the third round play.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By HARRY KECK

five high schools and all were represented in the tournament.

WHEN he came to Pittsburgh to enter Tech (his father is an architect in Akron), Howard gave up his golf and tennis except for occasional engagements and buckled down to football, basketball and track. He earned his letter as a freshman in each branch and gave up track when he became eligible for varsity competition. He has made his finest record in football, starring in the game in which Tech upset the dope by walloping Notre Dame two seasons ago and in other big games. In basketball, while the Tartan teams have not been of a high order in recent seasons, he has averaged five baskets per game in six battles against Pitt.

THE coming football season should find Harpster at his best. With only a fair team to work with last fall, he played so impressively against the Oregon Aggies at Seattle that the football officials and newspapermen out there rated him the best quarterback to show in that section during the season.

Whatever a quarterback and triple threat man should be able to do, Harpster does and does well. Class stands out all over him, and, with Gibby Welch through at Pitt, there is not a player to match Harpster in brilliance in these parts. He will bear watching from the start of the campaign.

A MANY-SIDED lad is this Harpster, studying to follow in his father's footsteps as an architect. Not only has he been a howling success as an athlete, but he also has won high honors as a student. He has been class president the last two years, student representative on the athletic council for two years, honor student in his classes, and a member of the various honor societies of the school. Now he is planning to spend part of his summer vacation period as an assistant to Andy Kerr, W. & J. coach, who will be director of athletics at the Dick Victor camp for boys, near Ellwood City.

But what I started out to say—if I have not made my point clear—is that Harpster has been holding out on us all along. He is a wizard as a golfer and has the makings of a champion along those lines if he ever gets the time to settle down and pursue that sport as closely as he has the others in which he has excelled.

Cross Section of Cozy Park Lodge

The Lodge Way Through Yellowstone Park

Everybody has a good time at the Lodges in Yellowstone. The "Lodge way" gives you all the fun of camping—without the hardships!

Lodges are really villages of comfortable bungalows set among the pine trees. They are heated and furnished with very comfortable beds. Meals are served in large central dining halls and the food is good.

In the evenings you can sit around a campfire of blazing pine logs, sing and eat pop corn, take part in impromptu plays or dance with collegians and cowboys. It's jolly at the Lodges—you'll find college girls "waiting on table"—and college boys hustling baggage.

Yellowstone is a wonderland of wild beauty and strange sights—geysers—boiling pools—wild animals—friendly bears—the spectacular Gardiner Canyon, Cody Road and the new Bozeman-Gallatin Road. $45—4½-day tour of the Park the Lodge way. You have an extra half day if you go on the "Yellowstone Comet"—the only solid train, Chicago to Yellowstone. Go in one park gateway, out another. It costs no more.

Let us send you a free booklet and help you with your plans.

Beware of Young Workers! Selfish Employers Warned.

—By B. C. FORBES—

WILL employers think this over?

"The young bloods probably won't stop until they wreck our union," said a past-middle-age member of a union that has become increasingly dictatorial and has caused certain employers to move plants where the union is in the saddle to open-shop places.

"We fellows who have worked for years know how well off we now are. We cannot help comparing our wages, hours and working conditions now with what they used to be. I'm a union man—always have been. And I give the union most of the credit for the betterment of our lot.

"BUT we old-timers almost to a man, feel that the employers have been darned decent in the way they have met out demands. It looks to us as if there's no satisfying a lot of the young shavers who have come into the trade in the last few years.

"They haven't the slightest consideration for the bosses. They don't give a hang—and they say so—whether he can afford to make ends meet after giving in to demand after demand. They have never gone through real hard times. They are heady, cocky. They're always agitating, never satisfied.

"They're going to go to far, by and by. And then you'll see a grand burst-up, a showdown fight between bosses and the union. And my guess is that the union will lose out because these young troublemakers, most of them either foreign-born or of foreign extraction, are insisting upon things that aren't fair, aren't in the cards."

DURING recent months, ever since unemployment became a disturbing factor, the number of letters from workers pouring in to this column has been beyond anything ever before experienced. I try to read them all. Moreover, I submitted them to an associate to study carefully and see if any broad deduction could be drawn from them. Here is perhaps the most significant comment handed me:

"A great many of the letters come from men and women who have been laid off mainly because of their age, from as low as 35 in the case of some women and the early 40's for men.

"But there is a very striking difference in the tone of the letters written by middle-aged and older workers still employed, and in the letters written by young employes.

"Almost without exception, the older workers express satisfaction with their working conditions. A lot of them write in, defending criticisms that have been made of their companies. They take pains to tell about the different things now done by their employers to make their work and their home conditions and their happiness greater than in the past.

"Hardly one of the young workers has a good word to say about either their own company or about other employers or about treatment of the working classes in America. You get the impression from these letters that there is seething dissatisfaction and discontent and agitation among the young element."

WHAT does the foregoing suggest?

It conveys very clearly, to my mind at least, the growing habit of throwing out employes that have reached or passed middle-age is short-sighted, dangerous and likely to lead to disaster in many organizations.

Without the sobering and steady influence of older employes who have learned loyalty and who are keenly appreciative of the marked improvement in working conditions, the younger heads, never having tasted real depression, are liable to agitate and agitate until their demands cannot possibly be met. They are out for Number One—without being wise enough, mature enough, to know from the stern actualities of life that unreasoning selfishness usually makes disaster inevitable.

Employers will do well to think this over carefully. Perhaps some of those who cannot be moved by considerations of humanity, considerateness and brotherliness, may be moved by motives of self-interest, by fear of the ultimate consequences if they persist in their iniquitous practice of throwing older workers into the street.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 25.—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 4 to 8 points, under a continuation of yesterday's selling movement encouraged by favorable weather reports and relatively easy Liverpool cables. Trading was fairly active and a few stop orders were uncovered on the decline which extended to 20c for October, or about 15 to 18 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

Houses with Liverpool and Continental connections were buyers on the decline, and with little more trade buying, prices rallied several points from the lowest by the end of the first hour.

Private cables said early trade calling and Continental buying had been supplied by London and Manchester liquidation, with some selling on better weather reports from the South in the Liverpool market. A private report said while reports were incomplete, present indications pointed to an increase of 7 to 9 per cent in acreage for the belt as a whole.

The market became steadier on trade buying and covering prompted by unfavorable features in private crop advices and talk of a healthier spot demand after the break below the 20½ cent level for October. That delivery rallied from the early low point to 20.53c or a point above yesterday's closing quotation. The volume of business tapered off on the advance, however, and the market at midday was quiet, with active months showing net losses of 5 to 6 points.

PROFIT TAKING FAILS TO HALT STOCKS

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—Despite the disappointment expressed in some quarters over the relatively small decrease in brokers' loans last week, the stock market today continued the recovery begun on Wednesday. Waves of week-end profit-taking sales swept through teh market at intervals, but they provided only temporary interruptions to the upward movement of prices.

A few high priced specialties were whirled upward 5 to 12 points, while a long list of industrials and rails were marked up 1 to 3 points. There was no change in the credit situation but a further advance in the price of export copper helped to stimulate bullish enthusiasm for those shares.

Radio was run up 12 points to 205, but reacted several points on announcement that the Federal Trade Commission had charged the corporation with violation of the Clayton Act in connection with the sale of vacuum tubes. Otis Elevator soared 11 points to a new peak at 204, Case Threshing advanced 6¾ points and Commercial Solvents 6½.

New peak prices for the year, or longer, were registered by American Bosch Magneto, American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred, Cerro de Pasco Copper, Burns Bros. B, Postum, Reo Motors, Martin Parry, Studebaker, Park & Tilford, Pacific Coast, Philip Morris and First National Stores.

The closing was irregular. Winding up of the week's operations brought some selling in the last hour which depressed several of the high grade rails and utilities. General Motors also turned heavy. A number of coppers meantime extended their advances substantially, a half dozen touching new high prices for the year. Otis Elevator's gain reached 16½ points. Total sales approximated 3,000,000 shares.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The raw sugar market was quiet today with no sales reported. Cuban was offered at last paid price of 4.52c delivered, while duty frees were available at 4.49c, but refiners showed no interest. The raw sugar futures market was fairly steady at the outset with some positions showing advances of a point on covering and trade buying. The demand was not aggressive and prices eased off under hedge selling and at mid-day were net unchanged to 1 point lower.

The refined market was unchanged to 10 points higher with prices now ranging from 6.00 to 6.10c for fine granulated. Yesterday's purchases apparently supplied the more immediate needs of the trade and there was a noticeable decline in demand.

GENERAL LIST IS NARROW

Volume of trading on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today showed no noticeable change from the previous session with the price structure holding steady and such changes as there were being of the smaller fractions in the initial dealings.

Lone Star Gas and the new Arkansas issues were in fair demand, but there was no evidence of a concerted movement in the stocks either on the buying or selling side. Most of the Lone Star handled in the forenoon session was at $51 a share while Arkansas common held close to last night's closing at 2⅛. Dixie Gas was handled in small amounts at 13, unchanged.

First sale of the newly listed Central Ohio Steel preferred was recorded this morning at 94. The common was up slightly at 22⅜, comparing with its initial sale in the formal list at 19¼ Wednesday. The preferred is a 7 per cent issue.

Glass stocks were dull and there was not much change noted in the bids and offers. Carnegie Metals was handled around 25 in the forenoon session.

Stronach Nails Won't Split Wood

But the Company is Splintering Production Records and Participating Stock Owners are Sharing Profits

The Stronach Nail Co., a new Pittsburgh organization, manufacturing patented non-splitting nails, is overwhelmed with orders. A good thing for any company, but especially for Stronach, which is strongly endorsed by the lumber industry. New equipment is being installed to help fulfill the orders. So that new capital may help them expand, a participating stock issue, selling at $25 a share, has been authorized. Owners of this stock share in all profits.

An Anchor to the Windward

A practical suggestion to the coming young man who wants to play safe for his family, without curbing his own ability.

PEOPLES SAVINGS & TRUST CO.

of Pittsburgh

FOURTH AVENUE AND WOOD STREET

OLDEST TRUST COMPANY IN PITTSBURGH
ESTABLISHED 1867

Capital, Surplus and Undivided Profits, $13,100,000

If a man at age 30 will create an Insurance Trust with us, and deposit $10,000 in sound securities, he will automatically create an estate of approximately $40,000. He will never have to put up an additional dollar. At his death, his family, or some particular member of his family designated by him, will receive either the $40,000 in cash, or the income from it, in the form and manner in which the creator of the trust shall stipulate.

A PROFITABLE WAY

Think of the profit of such a transaction: his money returned fourfold to his family at the time they will need it most. Life is uncertain. They may get the use of this $40,000 the very year that the trust is created, or in 3, 5, or 20 years. The longer they wait, the better; for the creator of the trust will be living and earning and adding to his final estate. But the point of the thing is, his people are sure of $40,000 no matter what happens to them.

Think of the satisfaction of such a transaction. An estate established; fixed, dependable; without the investment of an additional dollar after only one-fourth of what the family will receive is transferred to the trust fund. You could apply yourself to business with greater zest; accept the hazards of business with greater complacency; be easier with yourself in determining what you will do—because the fear that your family would suffer for the comforts of life would be removed.

(We use $10,000 and age 30 in our illustration. A little calculation, and an inquiry addressed to a life insurance agent, will apply the principle to other sums and ages.)

Our booklet "The Life Insurance Trust" gives full details. Send for your copy. Better—drop in for a chat with our trust officers—and work out with them a practical plan which will meet your particular need.

ELECTION NOTICE
Borough of Brentwood, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

Increase of Bonded Indebtedness

Notice is hereby given to the electors of the Borough of Brentwood, County of Allegheny and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in pursuance and by authority of an Ordinance No. 225, duly enacted and approved the 17th day of May, 1928, that a public election be held on the 26th Day of June, 1928, Between the Hours of 7:00 A. M. and 7:00 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, at the usual voting place and places for holding elections in the said Borough of Brentwood, County of Allegheny and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of obtaining the assent of the electors of said Borough of Brentwood, in the sum of a desire for said increase being expressed by the said Council of the Borough of Brentwood in the above recited Ordinance.

STATEMENT

The amount of the last assessed valuation of taxable property in said Borough is	$6,470,100.00
The total amount of the existing bonded indebtedness of the said Borough is	176,000.00
The total amount of the existing floating indebtedness of the said Borough is	98,504.39
The total amount of the existing debt of the said Borough is	274,504.39
The amount of the proposed increase in the indebtedness of the said Borough is	150,000.00

The percentage of the proposed increase in the bonded indebtedness of said Borough is 2.3182 per cent of the last assessed valuation of property in said Borough and together with the existing indebtedness would, if actually incurred, make a total indebtedness of 6.5407 per cent of said assessed valuation.

The proposed increase of the bonded indebtedness of said Borough is for the following purposes, namely:

Fifty-five Thousand ($55,000.00) Dollars of the proposed increase for the improvement of the Brentwood Park.

Thirty-five Thousand ($35,000.00) Dollars of the proposed increase for the construction of a sewage disposal plant.

Sixty Thousand ($60,000.00) Dollars of the proposed increase for the purpose of paying the Borough's share of the cost, damage and expense (including engineering expenses) of opening and improving new streets; of paving and repaving streets of the Borough; and of additions, extensions and improvements to the sewer and drainage systems of the Borough.

By order of the Borough Council of the Borough of Brentwood, County of Allegheny and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A. G. KAUFMANN,
BERNARD KESTNER,
Burgess.

ATTEST:
(SEAL)
F. H. APPENRODT,
Secretary of Council.

IN RE: Application of Mike Starvaggi for approval of the beginning of the exercise of the right and privilege of operating motor vehicles as a common carrier for the transportation of persons between Pittsburgh and the Pennsylvania-West Virginia State Line on Route No. 3, known as Steubenville Pike and passing through Pittsburgh, Ingram, Crafton, Beechcliff, North Star, Bavington, Florence and Paris. File A 19163-28.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that application has been made to the Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, under the provisions of the Public Service Company Law, by Mike Starvaggi, Main street, Weirton, West Virginia, Post-office Box 981, for a certificate of Public Convenience evidencing the Commission's requisite approval of a permit to operate a motor bus line from Smithfield street and the Boulevard of the Allies, Pittsburgh, to the Pennsylvania-West Virginia State Line through Ingram, Crafton, Beechcliff, North Star, Bavington, Florence and Paris, on Route No. 3, commonly called the "Steubenville Pike."

A public hearing upon this application will be held in a Court Room on the seventh floor of the City-County Building on Tuesday, June 5, 1928, at 8 o'clock (Eastern Standard time), when and where all persons in interest may appear and be heard, if they so desire.

Buy a Buddy Poppy—Help Men Who Carry On

In Flanders fields the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Unheard amid the guns below.
—JOHN M'RAE.

Those who sleep beneath the crosses on Flanders fields hear the brave song of the lark no less than many of their former comrades. The song of the lark is not for needy and disabled ex-service men, many of whom are in hospitals—many doomed never to hear—never to see—a lark, never to feel the joy of witnessing a sunset, never to smell the scents of wild bloom that perfume the summer air.

Many of those who are able are employed throughout the year making artificial poppies—Buddy poppies—a symbol of the heroic who died on Flanders fields and of those who did not die but carry on. These poppies are sold just before Memorial Day. The proceeds are used to aid sick and needy ex-service men.

Buy a Buddy poppy when it is offered. The price—what you make it—gives a local ex-service men's organization funds to carry on its work for the ones in need and unable to work. Your contribution pays the poppy maker, who was a soldier and now is unable to do other work, and it helps local veterans to aid others.

Buy and wear a Buddy poppy. A green label identifies it as the handiwork of a disabled soldier.

Lots Without Equipment Are Not Playgrounds

In the matter of playground development, Council is asked to give special attention to recreational needs of smaller children and to make no purchases of additional property until grounds already owned by the city have been put in proper condition.

Committee members representing the Chamber of Commerce, supplementing similar views of other organizations, appeared before Council to urge more consideration for smaller children, stressing the need for more swings, see-saws, sand boxes and wading pools.

Council, properly willing to listen, heard the suggestions patiently, and members pointed out that our playgrounds, while still far from perfect, are much nearer being completely developed than ever before. That is pleasing, but if they are not fully developed they do not answer their purpose, and it might be well to spend available money for development rather than acquisition of more property that also is undeveloped.

A vacant lot is a vacant lot, whether owned by the city or an individual, and it is just as available to children—and just as inviting, without equipment.

Look at These Faces

Which Do You Think Won?

CAPT. NEMATSU LED THE JAPANESE

GEN. FENG YU HSIANG LED THE CHINESE

Look at these two faces and you are not surprised to learn that in the recent fight the Chinese were driven out of Tsinan by the Japanese.

Here are the men that led the fighters.

Sometimes, not always, character is written on the face. In this case the Japanese and Chinese fighters' faces leave little doubt as to who would win.

All things being equal, 100 to 1 on the Japanese would not be excessive odds.

For centuries the Japanese have existed, fighting under the shadow of huge China. China and Japan remind you of Macedonia and Persia, in the days when Alexander marched into huge Persia and took charge.

However, in modern war it isn't necessarily the fighting jaw that wins, although it often DOES reflect the fighting mind.

The man with a weak chin can do as much harm with TNT or poison gas as a stronger fighting type. It's THINKING in the long run that counts, and the Chinese are good thinkers.

The greatest fighter that ever lived in Asia, Genghis Khan, was guided by a Chinese older than himself that he attached to his person after he had conquered China.

Give the Chinese MONEY, TIME and a LOWER DEATH RATE and they will be hard to beat.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Cutting Light

"According to astronomy it takes years and years for light to reach the earth from the stars. You even tell us that some of the stars whose light we see now may have been dead for years. Now, if it takes that amount of time for light to travel, did the eclipse we had lately really occur at the moment we were gazing at it or were we simply watching something that had occurred years before?—W. W."

THE eclipse actually began about one and a quarter seconds before its beginning was visible from the earth, for that is the time it would take light to pass from the moon to the earth. In an eclipse of either the sun or the moon the light is cut off at the distance of the moon from the earth, the phenomenon is concerned only with the time taken by light to traverse that distance.

Until the eclipse cuts it off there is a continuous series or chain of light waves extending from their source to the observer. If it is a solar eclipse, then before the moon's body is interposed the waves extend direct from the sun to the earth. The moon, like a screen, cuts them off, but the light does not disappear from the observer's vision until the last wave in that section of the series, which was already in the space between the moon and the earth at the moment when the chain was cut, has had time to reach the observer's eye.

If the moon, instead of being comparatively quite near the earth, were at the same distance as the sun, then the eclipse would occur 500 seconds before it would be visible from the earth, because it takes light 500 seconds to come from the sun to the earth. Light travels about 5,850,000,000,000 miles in a year. So, if a star at that distance were suddenly extinguished we should continue to see its light for a whole year longer, because it would require that length of time for the last wave in the chain to reach the earth. That particular measure of distance is called a light-year.

Since many appear to have difficulty in understanding this subject I will try another method of illustrating it. Suppose you are standing on the shore of a small placid lake, and some one, unseen by you, throws a stone into the still water. A series of waves will immediately be created radiating from the place of disturbance, and these waves will extend across the lake, finally arriving at the shore where you stand, and making you aware of what has been done on the other shore by breaking on the sandy beach.

Now, if the waves travel, say ten feet per second, and the distance across from shore to shore is two thousand feet, you will not know anything about the throwing in of the stone until two hundred seconds after it occurred. Thus the act that set the waves in motion will have ceased long before the message sent by that act has reached your field of vision.

To vary this again, suppose that it is sound waves instead of water waves with which we deal. Let there be a man shouting on the opposite side of the lake. You cannot hear his shout until the sound waves conveying it have crossed the lake to your ears. Sound travels about 1,100 feet in a second. Light travels about 186,000 miles in a second, from our point of view that is about the only essential difference between them. The cause of the sound ceases, but the air waves still bear on its effects to distant ears. The star is blotted out of existence, but the light waves that left it before its extinction continue onward through the ether, imperishable we may say, and so the star shines after its death.

"So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Able to Buy

DULL figures become vivid when humanized. Such are the figures showing the growth of the investment habit among Americans.

Fifteen years ago, it is estimated by a leading authority, the number of security buyers in this country was only half a million. Today it is 15,000,000. This rate of increase is more than one hundred times as fast as the increase in population.

The value of stocks and bonds bought in America since 1925 amounts to $34,806,782,000. The sum is incomprehensible.

A buying power so stupendous calls for wisdom and prudence in its exercise. One invested dollar in each eight goes into channels questioned by the conservative—chiefly into "blue sky" speculation.

All honest business is concerned in reducing this hazard. The reaching of thrift needs to be accompanied by instruction in how thrift may be made safe.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Money and Manners

AS the world rates success, you have reached the top.

Now you think you can afford to take things easy.

Your greatest desire now is to make an impression socially.

You are able to entertain in a manner which should open the way for your entrance into a better class of society than that in which you have mingled in the past.

You have frowned on the person who, even in a moderate way, followed the course you are about to pursue.

In your money-making game you have not had time to cultivate those whose friendship might have improved your manners.

You think a financial standing is sufficient to assure a social position of prominence.

You are not going to be regulated by the social code of dinner bridge parties.

Real people care more about having agreeable guests, who know how to conduct themselves when they do entertain, than they do for the bank roll unfamiliar with the etiquette which should guide guests and make them desirable.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Illusion

WE know the rose will blossom but a day,
We know how little while the lark will sing,
And yet, in dreams too dear to put away,
We tread the pathways of eternal Spring!

We know that childhood's golden hours are brief,
That youth's supernal bliss must fleetly pass;
But all unheeded drops the falling leaf
Upon the withered bosom of the grass.

For bravely on we go with eager eyes
That in each tempest find one glimpse of light
And, woven through life's web of tears and sighs,
Still trace one golden fiber of delight.

Logarithms

HERR KRIEGER, the Hamburg wizard at figures, now entertaining American mathematicians, is willing to sell his short-cut method of computing logarithms for a million dollars.

Logarithms play a part in the events, but they do not suggest a million dollars. Her Krieger would have a better chance with a new dance step or a song to touch the human heart.

Tales that are Told

Not Easily Scared

AS HE came round the corner of the building the policeman caught sight of a furtive-looking figure against the wall.

He approached with all the slow majesty of the law, but the furtive one remained where he was.

"Now, look 'ere, my lad," began the bobbie, "it'd be much better for your 'ealth if you was to take your 'ook, see? This is the twelfth time I've seen you outside this bank."

The furtive one looked up.

"That's all right, guv'nor," he said suavely. "I'll be here again ter-morrer. I ain't a bit superstitious."—London Answers.

Of the Same Opinion

SHE was inclined to be conceited, and could never resist looking at her reflection in a mirror, no matter wherever that mirror happened to be.

Her husband was patiently waiting to take her out. At last she was ready, and came tripping up to him.

"There," she exclaimed, "I wasn't very long, was I? Do you know, sometimes I—" She broke off and stopped to look in the hall mirror.

"George dear," she began afresh, "haven't I got a tiny mouth? In the glass it doesn't look large enough to hold my tongue."

"It doesn't," agreed her husband cruelly.

Both Were Right

ALTHOUGH Baxter and his wife had been married thirty years, it was said that they had never been known to agree upon anything except once.

Baxter bought a car, and in due course learned to drive it—in a way.

When he took his wife for her first drive all went well until they suddenly came to a sharp corner. Baxter attempted to pull the car round.

"Billy!" screamed his wife, grasping his arm. "You're going to hit that pillar-box!"

"I am," said Baxter.

A second later he had.

Safety First

THERE was only room in the crowded bus for one, and the woman, accompanied by her little girl, looked hesitatingly round.

A kindly but corpulent old gentleman came to the rescue, and took the child on his knee, but the little girl did not appear to be very comfortable. As soon as the bus stopped again she sidled over to her mother.

"Don't you like sitting on the gentleman's knee, dear?" asked her mother.

"It's all right in its way, mummie," returned the child, "but every time he breeves out he nearly pushes me off."

Taking no Chances

THE nervous-looking little man lowered himself gently into the barber's chair and asked to be shaved.

As the barber stropped his razor he started to open the inevitable conversation.

"What's your opinion of this 'ere Hinchcliffe affair, sir?" he began.

"Same as yours," answered the little man shortly.

"But how do you know what mine is?"

"It doesn't matter," snapped the other. "You're holding the razor, aren't you?"

Homes for Colored

NEW YORK CITY'S colored population numbers 259,000. The figures are compiled by an organization with white and Negro directors. The average head of a colored family earns $19.75 a week and pays $41.14 rent. The landlord gets a little more than half the worker's income.

This explains the fact that in some lodging houses rooms are rented for eight hours a day to one individual. The same room is being occupied by three men in twenty-four hours, different hours of labor making this possible.

Negroes most unjustly are compelled to pay extortionate rents, and mortgage companies as a rule decline to lend on homes for colored people—a severe and cold-blooded procedure since the white people brought the Negroes from Africa against their will, and by force.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as part of his public spirited housing plans, includes provision for colored people. Other capitalists should follow his example.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 25.—Thoughts while strolling: A mustache fixer sneaks a few peeps in a window mirror. Laddie Sanford, the polo player. Whatever became of Brussels carpets? Those roly-poly Broadway fellows with squeaky voices and tightly-clenched cigars—awaiting the big breaks.

The flip young things swathed in summer furs. The sidewalk crowd in front of the Hotel Somerset. Lee Simonson, the scenic artist. Crystal chandeliers again. And men's collar points grow longer. The lugubrious shop specializing in mourning stuff. H. T. Webster, a Tomahawk, Wis., boy who made good in the city.

A taxi full of midgets. Raymond Hitchcock back in town from trouping. Girls who slip away to the walk behind the public library for a smoke. Dan, the telescope man. See Old Sirius, the dog star—5 cents. That ubiquitous society girl—Beth something-or-other.

All the musical instrument stores, goody, goody, have marked down their saxophones. The legless news vendor at 42d street and Broadway. Always there in the wind and the rain. Howling of murder and a world wet with tears. Lew Fields' profile suggests the Flat Iron Building.

Leonard Bergman, who managed A. L. Erlanger's affairs. Times square responds to its summer manner. Clerks hanging to doorway awning ropes. Hatless men dart back and forth to soft drink parlors. The aristocratic vagabonds perch along the benches in the open places—to nod and dream.

Actors "at liberty" who would never admit it. And why should they? The smart talkers still clot around the Palace. Auto horns that sound like the wail of lost souls. Twelve years ago Irene Castle had launched the marmoset craze. What an idea that was!

Men with nothing to do have strange fancies. I met a retired old fuss-budget today who had read a cabled dispatch of the invention of a solution that destroyed everything it touches. He had spent a sleepless night trying to figure out what they keep it in. And now he's got me doing it.

Every theatrical producer at some time or other spanks the critics. This season George M. Cohan turned a few across his venerable knee. He did not relish what they had to say about an opus of his. Yet Cohan has had so many successes that a panning should prove at least an innovation. Most of us a few years out of short pants can remember the days when Cohan was universally hailed as "a loud-mouthed hoofer." But it so happened he had something to say, and he was heard. He stands out, in my opinion, like a clear-cut cameo, as the cleverest all-around man the American theater has produced. And he should be agitated this late in life by a few bricks.

It is the fashion to refer to certain critics as belonging to the Smart Alec School. Yet when one considers the monotony of theatrical attendance for a season of indeterminable nights one is mystified critics can retain even a shade of what Mr. Woollcott, the stage-struck meanie, terms "elfin humor."

Somebody writes to know why it is that with scarcely any exceptions no championship prize fighter has ever been the father of a son. I wouldn't know about that.

A "palooka" in pugilism is a ham-and-egg fighter — one who fights preliminary battles for a small purse. Nobody seems to know where the word was coined. But it is a descriptive punch. Imagine having dinner at the Ritz with a "palooka."

Aviation has been a death blow to embryonic hoboes. Riding rods or brakebeams on freight trains is dull stuff to imaginative youngsters these days.

It may be, too, that boys even without aviation would no longer care to be hoboes. Some of them, judging by their dress and manner, look as though they are hellbent on becoming man milliners.

TOO OLD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Very often we hear a man of 50 years or so complaining that his youth is over and that he no longer has a chance.

What has age to do with it! Youth is a matter of spirit.

Look at Trader Horn. He peddled tinware for many years in one of the remote countries of the world and at 73 blossoms out as the author of one of the world's best sellers.

Youth is that spirit that tackles the impossible. It moves mountains. It turns defeat into victory.

There is a man by the name of Seiberling in Akron, O., who at one time was the head of a great rubber enterprise, but at 63 found his personal fortune destroyed and his business swept from under him.

That was a pretty good time to sit down and weep. That is what old age would have done. But Seiberling at 63 was young, so instead of sitting down and weeping he got up and hustled. Today, in the brief space of less than seven years, he is again a commanding figure in the industry he helped to create.

Back in 1898 he borrowed $1,500 and organized a company which he named after Charles Goodyear, the man who invented vulcanizing rubber. Within 20 years he had built up a $200,000,000 business and his cargoes were on every sea and his market in every port.

Then came the war and post-war depression. In a few weeks—in 15 days of the 1921 market crisis—the work of a lifetime lay shattered at his feet. Seiberling was done, they said.

But he himself said, "Man never hits bottom. I can come back! I will come back! I must come back!"

So he set to work and worked hard. Within a year after his disaster he organized another rubber company, and within 12 months he had bought a factory and doubled its maximum output.

Today he is an outstanding figure in the American rubber industry. He has got back his personal fortune. Once cast to the bottom of the heap, he has again risen to the top.

This is just another one of those American stories where American grit and pluck snatched victory from defeat.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

A SOCIALLY ambitious lady in Washington gave a dinner recently, and wanted a butler. She rented a suit and put it on her poor old father, who did the job creditably. The old dear has spent his life trying to make this daughter happy, and he couldn't refuse her anything. It does seem as if a barrel stave or two wouldn't have done any harm in that family.

Lili Danita, tiny picture star, says she isn't going to marry till she is an "old woman." "These men," says Lili, "can go to hell." And she shrugs her pretty shoulders in such a way that you feel perfectly certain plenty of them will be willing to go for Lili.

For keeping secrets, the annual prize goes to Anastasia Tchaikovsky, Mrs. Leeds' guest. For having the most relatives, it goes to the census taker, Mrs. Florence Knapp.

Mrs. Tillie Leopold, of Chicago, got $900 a month alimony with her divorce, explaining to the court that she needed $1,000 annually for cosmetics.

If any woman spent $1,000 to make some homeless infant happy, she would be more beautiful than she could get with $2,000 worth of paint.

I know three women who adopted infants and in a year's time they were better looking than they ever had been.

Antoinette Donelley adopted two little girls, and I hardly knew her when we met recently. She wears a radiant smile, and is lovely.

Dr. Effa Davis, eminent physician of Chicago, much interested in eugenics and the founder of an infant asylum, to which no homeless little one ever has been refused admittance, says that human beings should pattern after wild ducks. They mate once a year and spend the rest of the time looking after their mates and their families. They are strictly monogamous.

Dr. Davis says that the Indians, like wild ducks, mated once a year till we taught them to drink liquor. Teaching Indians to drink liquor certainly is something to have on one's conscience.

Alma Clayburg sued her husband for $300,000 libel and found out in court that a woman can't sue her husband for libel. There isn't any such thing as libeling your wife.

That should loosen up the tongues of many men, and it makes one more item on the very short list of things that women cannot sue men for.

Politicians are very strong for marriage. It gives all their men two votes. And a man with grown children is a decided acquisition to any man running for office. Politicians always fight birth control.

Now they won't have to teach the women to turn to the left.
